

Global Consensus Sought on Population Growth

(c) By New York Times
Bucharest — The first World Population Conference, a government-level meeting convened by the United Nations, opens here Monday with 100 nations due to participate.
There is no expectation that it will produce any miraculous global program for controlling the increasingly alarming growth of the world's population, now approaching four billion. At the present rate of 2% a year, it would double in less than 35 years.
What is hoped for instead is that the 10-day conference will produce a global consensus on the problem and on the range of available remedies, as well as concurrence on what is described as a "plan of action" aimed primarily at getting nations to fashion their own remedial programs.
"Excessive global population growth," a recent State Dept. policy memorandum said, "widens the gap between rich and poor nations; distorts international trade; increases the likelihood of famine in the relatively near future; adds to environmental problems; produces unemployment; enlarges the danger of civil unrest; and promotes aggressions endangering peace."
The United States, which is expected to play a major role at the conference, is sending a five-member delegation headed by the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Caspar Weinberger, and including Russell Peterson, chairman of the federal Council on Environmental Quality.
Among other principal participants are to be the Soviet Union, China, India and the Vatican. While the Vatican is doctrinally opposed to artificial contraception and to abortion, it has encouraged widespread Roman Catholic activities in other phases of family planning.
There have been several international conferences on population in recent years, but all have been academic rather than on the level of governmental action.

The Bucharest conference, voted by the General Assembly in 1972, was preceded by three international symposiums focused on special aspects of the population problem and by preparatory sessions at the United Nations at which a draft "plan of action" was hammered out.
The draft plan of action says that, with suitable programs, "population growth in the less developed countries would decline by 1985." In the more developed countries, it says, the growth rate would remain largely unchanged at less than 3%. It would therefore decline in the world as a whole from 2% to about 1.7%, the draft adds.
It recommends the broadest dissemination of family-planning information, the establishment of minimum ages for marriage, the abolition of child labor, the full integration of women into social, economic and political life, and the institution of social security and old-age benefits throughout the world. The absence of these is felt to be a prime factor in excessive production of children as "insurance" in many countries.
Of 120 developing nations, about 30 have policies aimed at limiting population; another 30 have family-planning programs nominally aimed only at social welfare, and 50 nations are classified as either "neutral" or hostile to ideas of population limitation.
Opposition to the idea stems from a belief that, at least in certain national situations more population is needed for economic growth; and to the long-standing feeling among "have not" nations that the affluent countries are trying to limit world population for their own benefit.

Public Gloomy About Economy

By George Gallup
Princeton, N.J. — President Ford takes office at a time of profound public pessimism regarding the state of the economy. Not only do an overwhelming majority of the public (68%) believe the economic situation will worsen during the next six months, but half of all of the nation's adults go so far as to predict another depression such as that in the 1930s.
In characterizing inflation as "Public Enemy No. 1" in his recent address to Congress, Ford will get no argument from the American people. For many months inflation has been named by the public as the nation's top problem, with persons in all walks of life putting it ahead of all others, even including Watergate and confidence in government. Rarely in the four-decade history of Gallup audits of the public's top worries has concern over the economy been so prominent.
Most likely to predict a depression are persons in lower-income brackets, those with less than a college background, and blue-collar workers.
While the largest proportion of Americans surveyed (44%) say the federal government is chiefly to blame for inflation, as many as one-fourth (23%) blame the public, more than the proportion who blame business (15%) or labor (13%).

Gigantic Explosion Rocks Downtown LA

Los Angeles (UPI) — A gigantic explosion which police said "cleared a city block" rocked downtown Los Angeles Saturday night and ignited a major fire. Authorities said it may have been the work of Isaac Rasim, the so-called "alphabet bomber."

The explosion occurred in an industrial zone on the east side of the downtown area. It was not immediately known whether there were any deaths.
"It's supposed to have cleared a city block," a police desk officer said. He said it could have been Rasim's work because, "according to his statements, his next bombing would begin with the letter 'I' and the site of the explosion was an industrial area."
A witness at the nearby Coliseum, where a National Football League game was being played, described the explosion as "gigantic."
"It looked like a miniature atomic bomb," he said. "We saw the explosion then, seconds later, heard it. It was spectacular." The Coliseum is about six miles from where police located the blast.

Rockefeller Remains Veep Possibility

From News Wires
Washington — President Ford not only still considers Nelson Rockefeller a vice presidential possibility but believes there was a deliberate attempt to discredit the former New York governor with anonymous allegations, the White House said Saturday.
Presidential press secretary Jerry terHorst reported Ford's position and the possible involvement of an extremist organization after announcing the office of special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski had concluded from an investigation there was no truth to allegations Rockefeller had provided money to help disrupt the 1972 Democratic National Convention.
"President Ford has advised me that former Gov. Rockefeller has been and remains under consideration for the vice presidential nomination," terHorst said.
Rockefeller, on vacation in Seal Harbor, Maine, commented through his press secretary, Hugh Morrow, after the last of a series of White House clarifications: "We are glad the White House in two statements has knocked down this absurd story because it's absolutely untrue."
The allegations came last Sunday from an anonymous informer who claimed evidence documenting Rockefeller's involvement in the 1972 "dirty tricks" was contained in missing records which once were in the custody of convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr.

The informer was said to have told Philip Buchen, former Ford law partner who has since been named White House counsel, copies of the Hunt papers could be found in safe deposit boxes in a bank vault.
When advised, Ford ordered all the available information given to Jaworski's office. Members of the prosecutor's staff said later they had found nothing in the specified location and considered the investigation closed.
The incident and Ford's reaction to it prompted speculation Rockefeller no longer was in the running to fill the vacant vice presidency. But terHorst told reporters at midafternoon Rockefeller remained in contention, and added:
"The President regards the inaccurate information given to Mr. Buchen on Sunday, Aug. 11, as a deplorable example of the lengths to which certain persons will go to discredit Mr. Rockefeller and thereby attempt to remove him from consideration."

Eisenhower: Resignation Relief for Nixon Family

Philadelphia (AP) — President Nixon's family was relieved when he finally decided to resign, David Eisenhower says in a copyright story published in the Philadelphia Sunday Bulletin.
"We started debating as a family Friday night, and it carried over the weekend and into the week," said Eisenhower, husband of the former President's younger daughter, Julie. "It took quite a while for the decision to be made."
"Our position as a family was that we would support either decision. Our concern that last night was for him. But frankly, after a year and a half of Watergate, for the family this is a relief." The newspaper quoted Eisenhower as saying the night of the resignation Nixon was serene and sentimental.
"Mr. Nixon's mood that (Thursday, Aug. 8) night was... I would call it serene. Wednesday night was very sentimental. A mood settled over him at some point, predicting his final trip to California, of 'Let the chips fall where they may.'"
Eisenhower said his father-in-law's dreams for government had been frustrated and that Nixon had decided he would never receive due credit for his accomplishments.
"I wouldn't call it peace of mind," Eisenhower said. "He wasn't necessarily happy with it, but he wasn't nervous or agitated or bitter or on edge."

Eisenhower said Nixon acquiesced to resigning although he would have preferred to have seen the impeachment process continued.
"You have to realize that in his own mind, he still considers himself an innocent man. He didn't intend resignation as an admission of guilt, just of exhaustion."
"He felt it didn't serve anybody's purpose to put the country through all of that. The basic struggle was political from the outset, and politically he stood convicted," Eisenhower said.
Asked if he thinks Nixon is innocent, Eisenhower, a 36-year-old law student, said "Well, that depends on what's later proved. I've been ambivalent about this thing for a long time."
"I see nothing but shades of gray in the question of guilt or innocence because I think he's a great man who has done great things. He's guilty of the political sin of withholding information that he suspected would be relevant, anyway."
Eisenhower described Mrs. Nixon as being proud of her husband but hurt by his downfall.
"But she felt as much as anybody else that regardless of what the contemporary judgment is of his career, as a family we — and as an individual she — had the privilege of being involved in an incredibly controversial and important career, going all the way back to 1948."

Charlie No Longer Pet; Won't Be Missed

Chicago (AP) — Charlie the alligator, growing from a pet to a problem in the last five years, has been hauled from the Hanahan home hissing like his old angry self.
"I've been a nervous wreck, afraid to go down in the basement even to wash our clothes," said Josephine Hanahan, 55. "Charlie would start hissing and snapping at the air and once he nearly got out of his tank. I never liked Charlie very much, anyway. It got so he was terrorizing our household."
Animal Welfare League workers eased a rope around Charlie's neck, pulled him out of his tank-like cage and took him away Friday.
Since the oldest son, Andrew, now 20, bought the alligator from a pet shop for $5, it has grown to three feet long. It also became more vicious in the last year until, as Mrs. Hanahan said "it was like having a dragon in the basement."
"Andrew left home about a month ago and works as an auto mechanic," said his father, Andy. "We told him to take Charlie with him but he didn't so we got rid of him, with no regrets. Andrew was the only one who could handle him very well. The kids used to come over and give Charlie pencils and that gator chewed them into shreds. Once Charlie flopped out from the top of his pen and actually chased a little kid out of the basement. Oh, that Charlie was a mean 'un all right."
"He would take in so much air he would swell way up and then let it out 'hissssssssssss,'" said Hanahan. "It was enough to make your hair curl. Besides all this, Charlie was eating a pound of liver or fresh beef every day. Hell, with prices like they are we can't even afford that for ourselves."
"Nope, Charlie had to go, that's all."

While the cover story of Parade is outdated by the resignation, this is the first story highlighting the relationship between Mrs. Nixon and her press secretary, Helen Smith, and others who held that position. It also offers an unusually penetrating insight into Mrs. Nixon's personality.

The White House reported to the Sunday Journal and Star that Mrs. Smith is still there, now acting as publicist for Mrs. Ford and assisting during the transitional period. However, the new First Lady is expected to select her own publicist within the month, according to a White House spokesman.

Assassination Blame Set

A North Korean agent and a pro-Communist Korean living in Japan ordered and financed the attempted assassination of South Korean President Park Chung Hee in which Park's wife was killed, the Seoul prosecutor said Saturday. Investigators said Moon Se-wang, the 22-year-old murderer of South Korea's first lady, had confessed he attempted to kill Park on orders from Kim Ho-Ryong, an official of a Japanese pro-North Korean organization called the Chosoren.

India Legislators Vote For New President

Legislators voted for a new Indian president Saturday, and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's choice was believed to be the victor. The outcome for the ceremonial post will not be known until Tuesday, but barring a major upset the winner will be Agriculture Minister Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed, 69, who has served in Mrs. Gandhi's governments since 1966.

Large sections of the Philippines' main island of Luzon Saturday were flooded by the worst monsoon rains in two years. Floods, spawned by incessant rains and breached dikes, covered low-lying areas

Cambodian Rebels Hit American Cargo Plane

Communist rebel gunners hit an American C130 cargo plane over Angkor Wat Saturday in first such incident since the U.S. halted its bombing of Cambodia a year ago, field reporters said. The plane was only lightly damaged and none of its seven American passengers and a crew of four Americans was injured.

Official Confirms France Exploded Nuclear Device

French Defense Minister Jacques Soufflet confirmed France had exploded a nuclear device Thursday morning in the South Pacific, and the explosion could mark the end of France's current controversial atmospheric test series. Soufflet's comments, made in a television interview, represented the first rupture of an official silence that has surrounded the tests since they began earlier this year. Until now, the French government had refused to confirm or deny that the tests were even taking place.

Democrats Deadlocked

Democratic party regulars Saturday won three controversial points from "new politics" reformers, but remained deadlocked on the key issue of how actively the party will encourage participation by minorities, youth and women.

The 167-member party commission, working on a party constitution for submission during the Democratic mini-convention in Kansas City Dec. 6-8, recessed for the night without resolving the issue. The contingent of 16 blacks has threatened to walk out over it.

Through compromise, the regulars won approval of a provision which would permit, but not require, the party to hold policy conferences every four years between presidential elections and permit, but not require, the party's national committee to establish a judicial council to settle internal affairs. The regulars also prevailed on a plan that would permit the party's presidential nominee to choose his own national committee chairman after the convention.

Report on Pentagon Criminal Misconduct Denied

An Army spokesman Saturday denied a report investigators found evidence of criminal misconduct by high Pentagon officials in the handling of a $40 million advertising contract, but he conceded the project may have been mismanaged.

The spokesman specifically denied a report that the Army's Criminal Investigation Division (CID) recommended the matter be investigated by the Justice Dept.

Americans are drinking less milk and more beer, Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said Saturday. Butz, appearing at the Manawaw, Wis., centennial celebration, said milk consumption had declined 4% since 1968 while beer and ale consumption has increased 27%. "There is something wrong when we turn from nature's most wholesome food," he said. "We're becoming a nation of gulpers and snack eaters and that bothers me." Butz said milk, at 43 cents a quart, was the cheapest drink the American consumer could buy compared with 80 cents for a quart of beer.

Public Appeal

Dr. Leo McDermott, 66, an orthopedic surgeon, nearly lost his Portland, Maine, house because of more than $14,000 in unpaid back taxes. But in June, McDermott made a public appeal to his former patients in Portland to pay their past due bills, estimated at $150,000. During his 30 years of practice in Portland, he had never billed a patient. In response to the appeal, made through a newspaper advertisement in the Portland Press, McDermott received more than $6,000.

Won't Appear

The Rev. Dr. John Tietjen, suspended president of Concordia Seminary at St. Louis, says he will not appear at a hearing into charges that he is guilty of heresy. Tietjen, whose suspension triggered a split at the seminary and within the ranks of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, said he does not think he can get a fair hearing with conservatives in control of the synod. A hearing on the charges was tentatively set for Aug. 30.

Terms Changed

On the day he resigned, former President Nixon changed the terms of the gift

he had made to the National Archives of his presidential papers and stipulated no one could have access to them until Jan. 1, 1985, without his personal permission. The papers were originally donated with the provision that access would be restricted only as long as Nixon was president, the New York Times reported.

The birth of a baby to Britain's great train robber Ronald Biggs and his Brazilian girlfriend will make it impossible to expel him from Brazil, a source in the Ministry of justice said Saturday. Brazilian law bars the expulsion of the father of a Brazilian child.

12 Turk Cease-fire Violations Alleged in Cyprus

By United Press International

Turkish forces drove Greek Cypriot national guardsmen off a ridge overlooking the village of Pylot south of the Cyprus capital of Nicosia Saturday in one of 12 alleged cease-fire violations on the strife-torn Mediterranean island.

Turkish Defense Minister Hasan Esat Isik told newsmen in Ankara the 40,000-man Turkish invasion force, which sliced off a third of the island in a three-day offensive ending Friday, "will fully abide by the United Nations cease-fire."

An emergency committee of representatives from the Cyprus government and international and local Red Cross organizations asked Red Cross headquarters in Geneva for 50 tons of protein-rich food for an estimated 100,000 Greek Cypriot refugees driven from their homes by the Turkish advances of the past weeks. The refugees account for about one-fifth of the entire Greek Cypriot population. On the political front, Turkish Cypriot community leader Rauf Denkash said in Ankara his constituents will set up their own government in the Turkish zone soon unless the Greeks agree to negotiate a federated Cyprus state in a new round of peace talks.

Inflation Not Only Ford Problem

By Donald Smith

Washington — Inflation is unquestionably the most urgent problem facing Gerald Ford's administration. But it is far from the only one.

"He's on a bus full of people that's flying down the road pretty fast," an old friend of the President said recently. "It's got some mechanical problems, and all of a sudden the driver jumps out. Ford's got to get in the seat and keep driving."

He is under heavy pressures, many of them conflicting, to begin dealing with the problems that have gone unattended for so long during what he called the "long national nightmare" of Watergate.

Three trouble areas are related to the economy: agriculture, housing and defense.

Some agriculture experts believe a severe drought, inflation and shortages of corn and other feed grains will force Ford to reconsider U.S. policy of giving away grains to poor countries, and instead adopting a policy of trading with other countries that can afford to pay for American grain. Another possibility is a price freeze on food.

Inflation also is frustrating would-be homebuyers across the nation. The housing market has slumped badly, primarily because of high interest rates resulting from a tight monetary policy. In turn, organized labor, whose support Ford is courting, is being hurt by resulting unemployment.

Ford has indicated the problems of the housing industry deserve special attention, but thus far specific policies have not been announced.

The troubled state of the economy assures Ford will be under strong pressure to use defense spending as the single most effective instrument at his disposal for controlling fiscal policy. Pentagon planners already are at work on the fiscal 1976 budget request, certain to be even higher than the record $80-billion fiscal 1975 bill now working its way through Congress.

However, the new President made it clear in his address to Congress Aug. 12 that he did not want heavy cuts in the defense budget. As a member of Congress he generally opposed amendments to trim defense spending.

Ford faces a number of other pressing issues left over from the Nixon administration, among them health, consumer protection and transportation.

Ironically, Ford's presidency cleared the way for serious congressional consideration this year of health insurance legislation, which had been one of President Nixon's top domestic priorities. Until Nixon's resignation, the prospect of time-consuming impeachment proceedings had made action unlikely during the 93rd Congress.

Ford was instrumental in developing the Nixon administration's health insurance proposal now before Congress.

According to Health Education and Welfare Secretary Caspar Weinberger, its key features satisfy the President's desire to avoid creation of a budget-busting program run by a huge federal bureaucracy.

The most crucial consumer issue on Capitol Hill is creation of an independent consumer protection agency. Opponents of the bill in the business community are counting on Ford to repair Nixon's threat to veto a Senate bill unless specific changes are made.

According to Health Education and Welfare Secretary Caspar Weinberger, its key features satisfy the President's desire to avoid creation of a budget-busting program run by a huge federal bureaucracy.

Consumer advocates, however, note Ford voted for an earlier version of the bill as a House member in 1971 and that he opposed an amendment to seriously weaken the measure.

He reportedly told a Chicago Republican group in June that he would have voted for the 1974 House bill, which gave the proposed agency a number of important powers not included in the 1971 measure.

President Ford's past record on mass transit legislation doesn't augur well for proponents of a $20-billion long-range subsidy bill the House is preparing to consider.

In his message to Congress, he pledged to continue U.S. efforts to become independent in the energy field. But many experts in the area believe his first priority should be development of a coherent national energy policy, which they say the Nixon administration lacked.

In environmental matters, the President as a member of Congress voted to override Nixon's veto of the Water Pollution Control Act of 1972. Although he voted against the Clean Air Act of 1963, he has supported air pollution legislation since.

The first major decision he will face in the environmental field is whether or not to sign into law controversial strip mining legislation that has passed both houses of Congress.

Aside from trying to win more public support by his recent meetings with black leaders, Ford will not have to grapple with any major civil rights measures until next year, when Congress takes up anti-poverty and voting rights legislation.

Barring any major crises in civil rights, it is one area in which Ford will have considerable breathing space as he launches his administration.

Romantic Strife Smashes Golden Years Idyll

(c) By Chicago Daily News

Chicago — Romantic strife has smashed the golden years idyll the Albert Kubiniecs had hoped to enjoy after 42 years of marriage.

Mrs. Louise Kubiniecs, 82, filed a $250,000 alienation of affection suit in Circuit Court against the woman across the alley, Mrs. Mary Reizer, 81.

Mrs. Kubiniecs accused Mrs. Reizer of stealing the affections of her 90-year-old husband, Albert Kubiniecs.

Mrs. Kubiniecs said in her suit Mrs. Reizer and Albert "openly and maliciously carried on an illicit affair in Cook County and Hot Springs, Ark."

Besides that, Albert refuses to cut the grass anymore, she said.

Mrs. Reizer wouldn't come to the phone, but her daughter said, "The whole thing is ridiculous — everybody has gray hair."

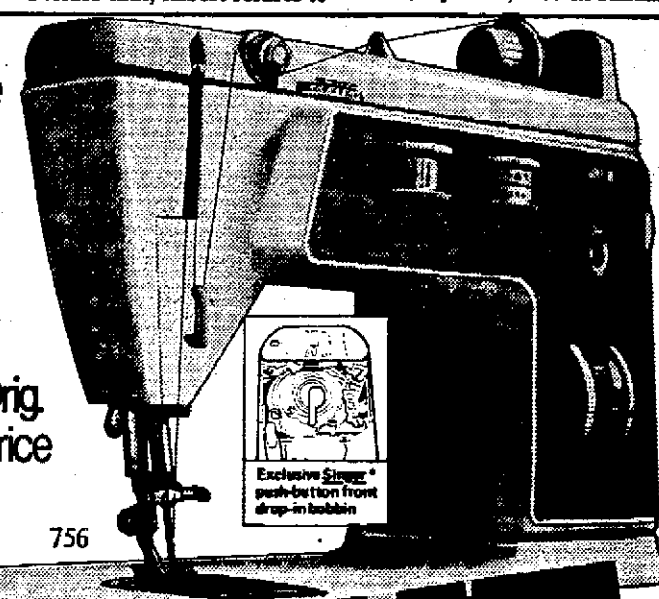

Albert is a retired cemetery caretaker. Mrs. Reizer's husband, a janitor, died in January.

FOR THE BEST OF YOUR LIFE

Now There Are Three

Bellevue has become the third Nebraska community to impose a municipal sales tax within its jurisdiction.

In 1969, the Legislature, skillfully guided into what it erroneously perceived was an either-or situation by Sen. Terry Carpenter, authorized cities to piggyback municipal sales taxes of ½% or 1% on state sales tax collections. That was presented as the only alternative to raising city property tax mill levy ceilings.

Omaha immediately jumped. Lincoln shortly followed suit. Initial ½% sales taxes in both metropolitan cities were hiked, after a respectable-appearing time period, to the maximum 1%.

Although rural state senators who really passed the 1969 act have since cursed themselves and donned rhetoric mourning clothes, the municipal sales tax is now totally a part of city government financing, impossible to repeal. In the proposed Lincoln city budget for 1974-75, the 1% sales tax is expected to net $5.3 million. The importance of that may be seen when contrasted with the expectation of $9.4 million from property taxation — on real estate, automobiles and personal property.

For some time, speculation was that Grand Island, which still (erroneously) is called the Third City, would be next to incorporate the municipal sales tax. That didn't come to pass. What's being alternatively talked in Grand Island these days, as a matter of fact, is something like the extra 1% pari-mutuel racing tax Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky has conjured for his city.

It may be guessed with some safety that now Bellevue has cracked the municipal sales tax ice, more of Nebraska's larger and middle-sized cities may be doing likewise in the next few years. City councils will have to balance never-ending service needs and demands against possible competitive disadvantages laid upon retail merchants.

Restoring the Voice of Science

It was Dwight Eisenhower who created the President's Science Advisory Council and brought the first full-time science adviser into the White House. John Kennedy followed his precedent.

So did Lyndon Johnson, but with a difference: He largely ignored his science advisers. And Richard Nixon, 19 months ago, abolished the scientific advisory group. Jeremy Stone, director of the Federation of American Scientists, even ended up on Nixon's "enemies list."

Clearly relations between America's scientific community and the White House have nowhere to go but up. There is hope that they will, because scientists who approached Gerald Ford while he was still Vice President say they found him sympathetic to their views on scientific policy making.

Certainly the argument that the science advisory group ought to be reactivated in the executive branch seems compelling.

Major problems facing the nation now — inflation, food supplies, energy, the environment, health care — all have scientific and technological dimensions. Obviously the talent of scientists is enlisted in the assault on these problems, but wisest use of this talent would be assured by a strong voice for science at the highest level of government.

Everyone appears to be looking to President Ford to heal divisions in our society. One of the major contributions he could make to this end would be a reconciliation between the presidency and the scientific community, closing a breach that is not only curious but alarming in this scientific age.

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

The heavy demand this year on Nebraska's underground water supply for irrigation purposes prompted at least two editors to urge passage of legislation that would place some restrictions and control over use of one of Nebraska's most valued possessions.

The Gretna Breeze and the Pierce County Leader called for an orderly program before an emergency develops.

"Heavy use of irrigation wells this summer is going to prompt more land owners to look toward the ground rather than the sky for a dependable source of moisture," the Gretna editor said.

The Hastings Tribune had words of praise for Nebraska's post secondary institutions — particularly the University of Nebraska-Lincoln — which "are sometimes criticized for making their students 'numbers' and not really caring about their personal problems."

Through the efforts of college officials, additional allocations to current federal student aid programs are being sought for potential students who might not be able to attend college because of drouth conditions which have affected their family's income.

"We hope their efforts prove fruitful," said the editor.

In an editorial headed "Enough, Sen. Curtis," the Omaha World Herald thinks Sen. Curtis went "the extra mile for Nixon and then some" in defending the former president even after Nixon dropped the biggest Watergate bombshell of all.

"There is a point beyond which partisan loyalty becomes blind advocacy," the editor wrote.

Pleased with a renewed effort to make motorists comply with the 55 mph speed limit, the editor of the Norfolk Daily News thinks that at the same time "the permanence of lowered limits be endorsed officially."

"This would then mean a change in performance standards for American vehicles, with some likely benefits as to cost. Highway engineering could also be affected, with less reason in the future to build roads to speedway standards. Not all of the benefits from lower limits are from lives saved," the editor wrote.

Cherish Each Day

Lincoln — An article in The Sunday Journal and Star (July 28) discussed a trend toward accepting death with less fear, also the acknowledgement that no pearly gates await us with a better life and eternal forgiveness, lurking just beyond. The next step is to revalue and cherish each of our allotted days on earth.

The article says superstition and horror of death are more prevalent among the uneducated. This gives us an extra reason for widening our perspectives.

If we learn to eat properly and regulate our habits for greater health, to read and share the excitement of history and man's accomplishments, but, most of all, to remove the blunders and ear plugs that the mentally lazy wear throughout life, painting, music, ballet, theater will make our days and years more rewarding.

The inevitable end, forgotten in business, becomes less important.

Two Farm Prices

Lincoln — According to the Sunday Journal and Star's big headline on Aug. 4, farmers are selling their land to foreigners.

In Victorian days the Irish in Ireland firmly stirred up big community lotteries, so one of their own would win, and be their neighbor, and the unknown foreigner was out.

Is it not worse to have two prices on a good farm? One price

Meany at 80

The one-time plumber who helped push a president out of office is visiting at the White House again. He's been a lord of labor ever since the days of Roosevelt — and he acts like he'll go on forever.

By Paul McGrath

George Meany turned 80 Friday, but he already had his best birthday present — Richard Nixon's resignation.

The president of the AFL-CIO was among the first — and certainly the most powerful — of national leaders to call for Nixon's impeachment or resignation.

The scenario played close to Meany's own. He predicted privately during the federation's midwinter executive council meeting last February that the House Judiciary Committee should approve impeachment articles and the President would resign shortly thereafter. He was off only on timing. He expected it sooner.

One largely overlooked element in Nixon's downfall was Meany's and the AFL-CIO's year-long impeachment campaign, climaxed by an impeachment resolution unanimously adopted at the biennial convention last October.

The vital key in that drive was the special congressional election last spring, when the AFL-CIO poured money and manpower into selected contests, making Nixon and Watergate prime issues. Republicans lost five of those seats, putting the fear of political death into congressional Nixon-backers up for reelection this fall.

The impeachment campaign followed what Meany calls the biggest gamble of his career, one for which he received the most criticism — his decision to sit out the 1972 presidential campaign.

Why did Meany refuse to endorse Sen. George McGovern, even though his distaste for Nixon was hardly restrained?

First, Meany didn't like McGovern's voting record on labor issues, and believed McGovern had double-crossed labor on some votes. He also opposed McGovern's dovish stand on Vietnam.

Another factor was his decision not to throw money and effort down the drain on a losing candidate. His feeling was the money should go to save seats in Congress in the face of a Nixon-landslide.

But the biggest factor was Meany's belief that to come out either way could have irrevocably split the trade-union movement.

As it turned out, AFL-CIO statistics indicate, members of affiliated unions voted 51% to 49% in favor of Nixon.

Meany's gamble paid off. At 80 he will preside over a labor movement that, with 14 million members, is stronger than ever and gaining. He seems likely to get the veto-proof Congress he has been pushing for. The prospects for a Democratic victory in the 1976 presidential election must be considered better than they have been since 1964.

Sitting out the 1972 election has put Meany in a favorable spot as the 1976 campaign approaches. The Democrats can't take him and the AFL-CIO for granted as they have in the past.

Meany and Robert S. Strauss, Democratic national chairman, are not on speaking terms. Or rather, Meany is not on speaking terms.

"Strauss does not understand that the AFL-CIO is not a branch of the Democratic party," says Meany. "He has the crazy idea that because a lot of our people are Democrats, because 78% of our membership are registered Democrats, that we are in some way a part of the Democratic party."

He adds emphatically, "We are not."

In fact, Meany says privately, there is at least one Republican — he refused to say whom — he could endorse as a presidential candidate.

The crusty old Irishman, who started out as a plumber in the Bronx, just seems to go on and on.

It seems like the headlines have been going on forever: Meany and Roosevelt, Meany and Truman, Meany and Ike, Meany and Kennedy and Johnson and Nixon and now Ford. He has pledged "all possible support" to Ford.

Meany comes from a close-knit family and followed his father as an official of a plumbers union local. Family life remains important to Meany. He and his wife Eugenia, with whom he used to walk picket lines when her union, the International Ladies Garment Workers union, was on strike, live in a comfortable home in Bethesda, Md.

Everything he reads goes into a file in his head, likely to be instantly recalled when the time comes that the information is needed to knock down a John L. Lewis, which he did at the AFL convention in 1947, or persuade the AFL-CIO executive council or a congressman to see things his way.

There is no way to catch Meany on something he might have said a year or a decade ago. A reporter asked him last week whether he had changed his mind since saying a year ago that football players shouldn't strike.

"I said that?" he asked, his head turning toward the questioner like the turret of a Sherman tank. "I said they shouldn't strike?" you could almost hear the computer whirring.

"No, you're all wrong," came the riposte. "What I said was that they shouldn't be in unions."

"They shouldn't be in unions, because if we put them in a union, we'd expect them to act like union members," Meany said. "And can you imagine a football player who gets $25,000 a game respecting a picket line to protect a $3-an-hour ticket seller?"

"I'm quite optimistic about the future of organized labor," said Meany. "I've seen organized labor come from a fairly simple operation to a very sophisticated operation. It was quite simple in the old days. You didn't get enough money in the pay envelope. Why? 'Cause the boss wouldn't give it to you. Now, he had it — he just wouldn't give it to you."

"Just an old meanie, he wouldn't give you that sort of money. And we'd go to politicians and we'd say, 'We don't like this legislation, and because we don't like it, we want you to vote against it.'"

"We don't do that anymore. We present facts and figures, legal arguments, all this sort of thing. We deal with everything that affects the American community. We deal with everything that affects education, civil rights, consumer protection."

Meany's first official act on taking office as president of the American Federation of Labor, in 1952, was to make an overture to the Congress of Industrial Organizations on the subject of a merger.

They merged in 1955, making Meany the most powerful labor leader in the world.

The merger is considered Meany's greatest achievement. He looks forward to bringing back into the AFL-CIO the big three independent unions — Teamsters, biggest in the nation with two million members, United Auto Workers with 1.4 million members and United Mine Workers with 200,000 members.

1947 convention. Rivalry with Meany ended with the frustrated Walter Reuther's withdrawing the UAW in 1968. And the Teamsters were kicked out in 1957 after corruption was uncovered involving Dave Beck and James Hoffa, each of whom went to prison. Now Lewis and Reuther are dead, and Hoffa seems to be out of the picture.

Meany would welcome the UAW back (there have been some discussions in the union of re-affiliation), and the miners also could come back.

The teamsters, however, represent another question. Complicating the picture is the farm-workers-union battle in California between Cesar Chavez, backed by Meany and the AFL-CIO, and the Teamsters. The Teamsters have not shown any inclination toward re-affiliation.

Meany said, "Many years ago we laid down a very simple prescription for the return of any union. We said that any union that wants to return has to accept the constitution and the rulings of the AFL-CIO. Now, you've got to understand that with the Teamsters, while there was all this record of corruption, and we knew about it, that was not really technical by the reason why they were expelled."

"Under our constitution we had a right to call in any union that was under suspicion of corrupt activities regarding handling of union finances and things like that. Now, with the Teamster situation there was really much more than a suspicion because under sworn statements given by officials of the Teamsters union under oath it was quite obvious there was corruption and misuse of money and so forth."

"We called the Teamsters in 'and said, 'you've got to appear before our ethical practices committee and you've got to explain your actions,' and they just said, 'We will not appear. We will not.'"

He added, "I tell you very, very frankly, while the Teamsters are doing the work of the growers in California, kicking these little farm workers around, I wouldn't want them back in the AFL-CIO."

Meany turned 80 seemingly as vigorous as ever, having a hell of a time, helping to push a President out of office and beginning a relationship with another new President — as Tuesday's "very friendly and very constructive" 45-minute meeting at the White House shows.

Goals and Policies: Those Who Participate Run the Show

By Dick Herman

Who isn't already a bit deaf hearing repeated calls to learn the Lessons of Watergate? Important lessons, aye, dealing with the evils of excessive government secrecy, personal aggrandizement and majesty, abuse of constitutional power, of ends and means, etc.

For the work-a-day world of Middle America, geographically and perhaps culturally, fine points of those Great Themes may be a trifle too fine. Something more practically valuable is instruction in participatory democracy.

Such as the short course in said subject delivered unto a group of Lincoln citizens Thursday night.

The classroom was the fourth-floor cafeteria of the County-City Building. And the only reason the course wasn't any longer than four hours was that the guy in charge of the beanery bounced everyone at 11:30 p.m. He said he needed time to get set up for a morning breakfast.

Occasion was a meeting of the Lincoln-Lancaster Goals and Policies Committee to bear a presentation on Lincoln's possible physical futures, to slightly reword the group's Stevens Creek statement, approve a new policy on energy and approve bylaws.

Now the G&P Committee is an unusual sort of creature, blown into life by city and county officials. Processing of diverse community attitudes and thinking into community lifestyle strategies, for the city and county, is the committee's function.

Lincoln's more traditional civic leadership and power centers began to pay more attention to the committee in the spring of 1973. There was even some modest alarm when the committee's then-chairman, Bob Jeambey, said the G&P work product "doesn't accept a growth-for-growth's sake philosophy," as expressed by members of the Chamber of Commerce."

Concern elevated when documents proposed for adoption by the committee last Thursday night were mailed out. One suggested a new requirement that the Committee's final statements become sort of an inviolate city-county constitution. Rather like an old-style Prussian saying, over his monocle, "Ve vill do dis" and "ve vill not do dat." Und making it stick, too, schweinhundt.

There is an interesting theory abroad that several recent events in Lincoln's recent history may have jiggled old equilibriums. One such event was the result of the 1973 city council election. It brought the rise of "less predictable" council members. Another was the victory — if yet temporary — of activist citizen groups on the Northeast Radial issue. Wholesale city council and county board acquiescence to the G&P committee's notebook of philosophy might be yet another such event.

Against this background, the citizen mix at the Thursday night meeting showed in sharp bas relief. A sizeable number of prominent Lincoln home builders and developers, plus friends, showed up. Some freshly enrolled as committee members. Also there was the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce Staff leadership. There were public officials, too — Council members Helen Boosalis and Sue Bailey and County Commissioner Jan Ganger. The three women had departed when voting on bylaws was reached. But two former City Council members, Merle Hale and Dick Hartsock, were active to the finish.

It quickly became clear who constituted the meeting's majority. That was demonstrated on the 2-1 vote to change wording of the existing G&P on Stevens Creek development. The new language later was being interpreted by some — maybe erroneously — to mean agricultural land east of Lincoln may be urbanized more rapidly than former G&P committee members wanted.

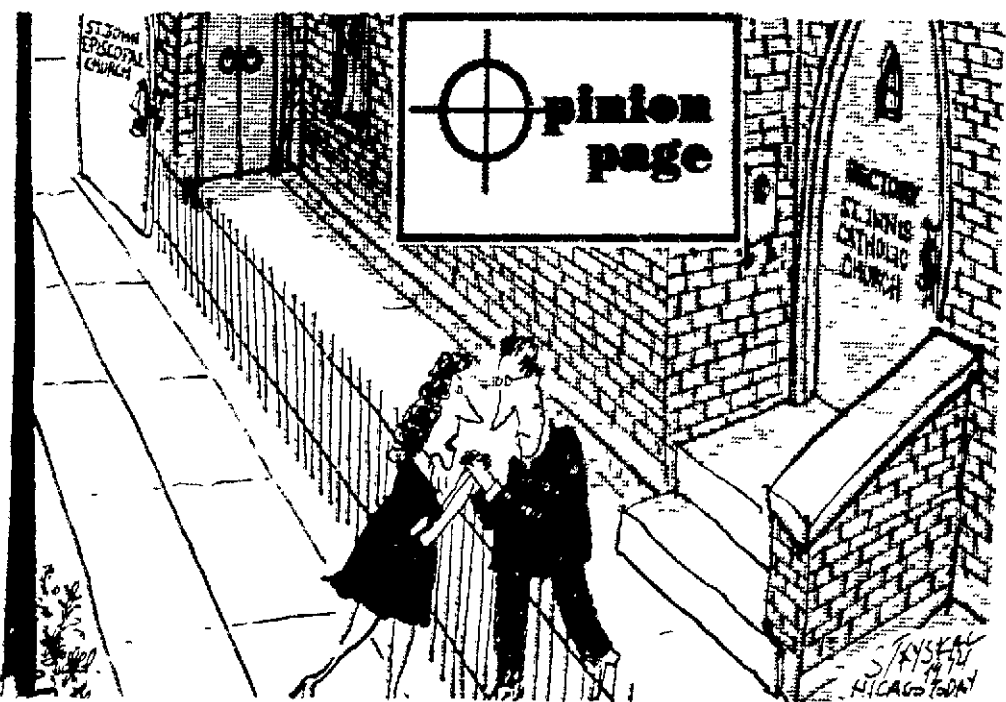

But the core lesson of participatory democracy was summarized by attorney Dave Pierson. He skillfully led the way to adoption of proposed bylaws which he had privately prepared in advance, contrary to those drafted by committee leaders and planners. Pierson, one of the few men in Lincoln wearing a straw boater this summer, stressed that "them who come, decide."

Successfully, Pierson discarded recommendations the committee's executive board continue to be appointed with an eye toward guaranteed geographic and socio-economic balances. That is not the American way, not the democratic way, he emphasized.

"If we are going to play the democracy game, let's play the game," he said.

Which means: In free-form groups such as the G&P Committee, citizens who invest the time and effort to participate will run the show, as they always have. They can even try to flavor the future by writing specialized rules.

Which also means: In elections, those who take the time and trouble to vote are the only ones who'll have any say in the results. And if you can muster a majority of those voting, you win. You control.

"Oh, John, phooey on what my church will do to me for becoming a priest . . . But what will yours do to you when you tell them we want to get married?"

Ethiopian Military Said Put on Spot

Addis Ababa (UPI) — Prime Minister Michael Imru and at least four cabinet ministers were reported Saturday to have resigned in a move which could force an army takeover of the government of Ethiopia.

The resignations were reported by diplomatic sources to have been made after the army arrested Emperor Haile Selassie's chief of the 4,000-man force responsible for the emperor's personal safety.

The sources said top army leaders were trying to persuade Imru to stay on and an army spokesman termed the resignation reports "absolutely untrue."

But the sources insisted Imru was determined to step down rather than allow the army to arrest the four ministers, who have been charged with corruption.

diplomat said.

"At the moment the military doesn't want to take over the country, but if the prime minister does resign, it may be forced to form a full military government and this could spark another crisis here."

The ailing 82-year-old Selassie closeted himself in a downtown church for most of the day.

Imru and the cabinet ministers submitted the resignations after an emergency cabinet meeting called to discuss the military show of strength through the capital Friday.

The military coordinating committee which effectively runs the country announced it had arrested Maj. Gen. Taseffa Lemma, commander of the emperor's personal bodyguard. Diplomatic observers said the arrest indicated that the elite royal force which had been split on whether to remain loyal to Selassie had now fully joined the army movement.

Emperor Haile Selassie

The diplomats said the arrest was another step in removing trusted aides of the monarch who ruled Ethiopia for 50 years, 14 as regent and 44 as emperor under the title "King of Kings, Elect of God, Lion of Judah."

The army stripped Selassie of his remaining constitutional powers Friday by abolishing his crown council, military advisory council and court of justice.

The army revolted in February, demanding widespread reforms in the impoverished east African kingdom. Since then it has arrested at least 150 prominent Ethiopians accused of corruption under former governments.

Martha Mitchell Relieved 'Truth Finally Out'

By Helen Thomas

Washington (UPI) — Martha Mitchell says she is relieved President Nixon has resigned and "the truth has finally come out." She does not feel the ex-president should be immune from prosecution.

In her first comment on the resignation, Mrs. Mitchell in a telephone interview also expressed hope that all the facts of Watergate-related abuses "will be immediately exposed so that Americans can see what really happened rather than being shelved for 100 years."

"I just feel everybody, regardless of who, should be brought to justice. He could not have resigned under any circumstances had he not known what was in store for him," she said referring to Nixon's probable impeachment and possible conviction.

"Why should he be granted immunity?" she asked. "He's always been adamant on the subject that anybody who disobeyed the law should be prosecuted and he is in that category. I don't feel sorry for anyone who disobeys the law."

"He always said that Alger Hiss, or anybody who disobeys the law should not have any barrier around him and nobody should be above the law."

Mrs. Mitchell said she believes in amnesty for the Vietnam draft resisters and deserters because "I just think by God these people had no right to be over there fighting. We didn't declare the war. It was illegal. It's time to take the government back to the people."

She first called for Nixon's resignation in early April 1973 and says she now feels "vindicated," but added: "This has been a traumatic experience for me. My love, my life, my family was involved in this mess. I took it for granted that we had one of the greatest administrations. I worked for the things I thought it stood for."

Mrs. Mitchell has not seen her husband John Mitchell — former attorney general who faces trial Sept. 9 on Watergate cover-up charges — in almost a year. She has filed for a legal separation. Her daughter Marty, 13, has been attending Sacred Heart Convent School in Greenwich, Conn., and has been with her father during the summer.

"The hell I've had to go through . . . was truly traumatic," Mrs. Mitchell said.

Car Safety Devices Losing in Congress

(c) By Newhouse News Service

Washington — Congress moved during the past week to unhitch interlocks, deflate air bags and loosen seat belts.

The actions taken — variously described as blows against big brother, or death sentences for thousands of motorists — were these:

—The House voted 339 to 49 to overturn a federal regulation to require that new cars be equipped to prevent their being started unless seat belts are worn. If the Senate goes along, the year-old ignition interlock rule would be repealed immediately.

—As part of the same bill, the House voided a plan that would oblige automakers to install air bags as standard equipment, beginning with 1977 models. Consumers would have the option of purchasing the bags that in a crash pop open to cushion riders from injuries.

—Both the House and Senate agreed no federal funds should be earmarked to promote mandatory seat belt use laws. Congress just last year said states should be encouraged to enact such laws. But now the transportation Dept. will not receive any money specifically for that purpose.

Rep. Louis Wyman, R-N.H., led the anti-interlock and air bag forces in the House, and expressed the view of many when he said the federal government should not become big brother to motorists.

"This is a most extraordinary, most unfounded, most unreasonable and most irrational position," he declared. "Actually it is un-American."

Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., however, reminded his colleagues: "For all of its shortcomings, the interlock is doing the job it was designed to do. The use of lap and shoulder belts in 1974 cars is 10 times higher than in 1973 cars."

Broyhill released a letter from Transportation Secretary Clude

Brinegar that argued: "We have good evidence that the added human cost in automobile deaths and injuries from adopting these amendments is potentially quite large." He added that half of the 30,000 vehicle occupants who died in 1973 as a result of being thrown against their dashboards or who were ejected "could have been saved had they used a proper restraint system."

Fourteen senators are sponsoring a bill similar to Wyman's amendments. Since the amendments passed by the House were added to a bill already approved by the Senate, a joint conference committee must resolve the differences.

Plant Genetics Building Crops

By Richard Worsnop

Variety is the spice of plant as well as human life. In their ongoing effort to create high-yielding, disease-resistant strains of wheat, corn, and other food crops, agricultural geneticists are constantly crossing different varieties of the same type of plant. Such experimentation made possible the Green Revolution.

Sometimes the simple importation of an established foreign variety will suffice. Friday, for example, marked the 100th anniversary of the introduction of hard red winter wheat into the United States. The grain was brought to this country by a group of German-speaking Mennonite immigrants from southern Russia. The hardy new variety flourished in Kansas, where it was first planted, and it is now grown extensively in Nebraska, Oklahoma, Montana, Texas, and Colorado as well.

Durum wheat, grown almost exclusively in the Dakotas and Minnesota, also is a Russian import. It was brought here in the late 19th century by Mark Alfred

Opinion

Carleton, a cerealist for the U.S. Agriculture Dept., after a worldwide search for drought-resistant and rust-resistant wheats.

A quest like Carleton's would be far more difficult today. One reason is that many wild strains of basic food crops are disappearing as civilization expands into formerly remote areas.

A second reason was cited by Los Angeles Times reporter Robert A. Jones: "The disappearance of primitive plant varieties and the seeds that store their often unique characteristics is a direct result, scientists believe, of a modern agriculture which has covered vast portions of the globe with uniform, often identical crops. The genetic erosion has been made more serious by the discovery that the new crops are often highly vulnerable to both pest and disease. Producing uniformly high yields, each plant also carries uniform weaknesses. If one plant falls prey to a disease, all fall prey."

To forestall calamity on a large scale, a move is under way to establish seed banks in various parts of the world. The largest such facility, operated by the Agriculture Dept. at Fort Collins, Colo., contains about 100,000 plant varieties.

Perhaps what the world needs now is another Luther Burbank. The great American plant breeder, who was born 125 years ago, developed more than 800 new varieties of fruits, flowers, grains, vegetables, grasses, and forage plants, many of which are still economically important. His more notable "creations" included 113 varieties of plum, the spineless cactus, and the Burbank, or Idaho potato.

Burbank did all this without the aid of modern principles of plant genetics. Instead, his work was based largely on Charles Darwin's theories of natural selection. And he clearly subscribed to the currently fashionable notion that plants respond to human love and care. "There is no great gulf between plant and animal life," he wrote shortly before his death in 1926. "I know that plants have minds — subconscious minds, but at any rate, minds." Thus, Burbank's advice to today's plant geneticists might be: If all else fails, try a little tenderness.

Bomber Postponing LA Plan

Los Angeles (AP) — A man claiming to be the "alphabet bomber" telephoned the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner on Saturday and said he was postponing today's planned bombing in Los Angeles.

The newspaper declined to say whether the caller gave a reason for his decision. The FBI said it received word from the newspaper that another call had been received and a spokesman said the call was being checked out.

Herald-Examiner City Editor Tom Caton said the caller identified himself by a secret code name and was apparently the same man who has called in the past claiming responsibility for the Aug. 6 bombing which killed three persons at Los Angeles International Airport.

Boyle Witnesses To Lead New Lives

Washington, Pa. (AP) — Silous Huddleston and Annette Gilly, the father and daughter who linked the United Mine Workers (UMW) union leadership to the killing of Joseph Yablonski and his family, were freed Saturday, with orders that their identities be changed to protect them from retribution.

Mrs. Gilly and her ailing, retired miner father will be transferred to federal authorities for their secret release at some later date.

Mrs. Gilly, 33, and Huddleston, 64, have been in custody since February 1970. In May 1972 both pleaded guilty to a general charge of murder in return for their testimony and promises that they would escape the then-lawful death sentence.

At Saturday's proceedings, Washington County President Judge Charles G. Sweet set the degree of guilt at second-degree murder and sentenced the pair to 4½ years in prison, exactly the amount of time each has already spent in custody. In addition, each was sentenced to two years on state conspiracy charges, which Sweet decreed have also been served. Each was given 10 years probation for the deaths of each of the Yablonski women, to be served concurrently, and ordered to pay the costs of proceedings against them.

Under Sweet's order, Mrs. Gilly and Huddleston will be released at a secret location with false names, new Social Security numbers, and fabricated life histories, "in order that no one ever know who they are again."

In arguments before the court, special prosecutor Richard Sprague said sentencing "under these circumstances" is always difficult.

"But I have discussed this with many others, including the Yablonski family," Sprague said, adding that there should be consideration for the help the two witnesses gave.

"This case would never have satisfied the ends of justice if we prosecuted the people at the bottom — the thugs — and not the people at the top," he said.

Mrs. Gilly's confession named William Prater, a UMW field organizer in Tennessee, as the man who ordered her father to arrange for the murder of Yablonski, a reformist who was challenging the leadership of then UMW President W. A. (Tony) Boyle.

She said her husband Paul was contacted by her father in the summer of 1969 to arrange for Yablonski's death.

Six months later, on New Year's Eve, Paul and two other men broke into the Yablonski farm house in nearby Clarksville and shot Yablonski, his wife Margaret and his daughter Charlotte in their beds.

Three weeks after Mrs. Gilly's statement, Huddleston named Prater and Albert Pass, secretary-treasurer of District 19, as the instigators of the plot.

In March, Boyle was convicted of three counts of first-degree murder. He is appealing his case from a Missouri jail where he was sent for misuse of union funds.

Vacation Blues

London (UPI) — American businessman Frank Olafsson flew home to recover from his vacation.

He took a taxi to the airport and mistakenly paid the driver double the fare.

Leaving the cab he tripped over a curb, ripped his pants and gashed his knee.

Discovering he had arrived at the wrong terminal, Olafsson raced to another to catch his flight. He lost.

Waiting in the terminal, his duty-free bottle of whisky fell through its bag and smashed on the floor.

"I don't think London is my lucky city," he said before boarding another flight. "Apart from everything else it seems to have rained since I got here."

U.S. Talks Reassure Hussein

(c) By New York Times

Washington — King Hussein of Jordan said Saturday he had received sympathy but no commitments in talks with American officials that the U.S. would meet his desire to press for Jordanian-Israeli negotiations as the next diplomatic step in the Middle East.

In an interview at Blair House where the King has stayed during his three-day visit, Hussein reaffirmed his government's threat to boycott a resumption of the Geneva conference on the Middle East unless the Israelis have withdrawn forces from at least part of the West Bank of the Jordan River, seized by Israel from Jordan in the June 1967 war.

"I was very reassured," Hussein said of his talks with President Ford, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger. But he said he was told by Kissinger "that a period of time will have to pass" before any decisions can be taken on where the next diplomatic steps should be directed.

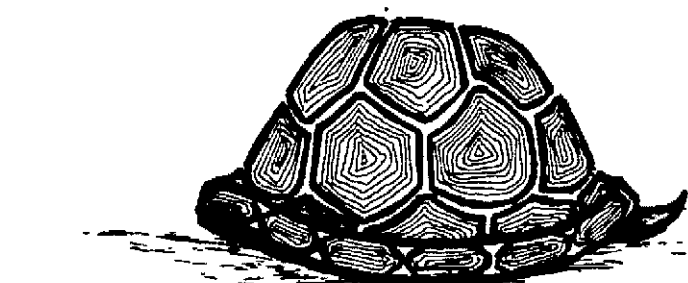

American officials said Kissinger understands Hussein's strong desire to match the "disengagement" accords negotiated by Egypt and Syria with Israel but he could not make any commitment until after he had held talks next with the Syrians and consulted again with Israeli leaders. Premier Yitzhak Rabin was expected to come to the U.S. this fall, perhaps as early as late next month.

Senior American officials confirmed the Middle East situation was extremely complicated at present, with no two parties in agreement on what should be done next.

Hussein and his premier, Zaid Rifai, who met with Kissinger last week, have been insisting on Jordanian - Israeli "disengagement" talks as the first step.

The Egyptian foreign minister, Ismail Fahmy, who has spent the last week in Washington, has shown no enthusiasm for the Jordanian plan and has talked instead about finding a way to initiate a "second stage" Israeli-Egyptian negotiation, to follow-up on the troop separation accord in the Sinai last January.

Syria's Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam, will come to Washington Friday and he is expected to press for further Israeli withdrawals on the Golan Heights.

While People All Over The World Are Hiding Their Heads Because of Talk About Inflation And Shortages . . .

We've found that, like the turtle, unless we stick our neck out, it's pretty difficult to progress . . . so we at Wanek's of Crete are going right on buying and selling as if we never heard of either of them. And surprisingly enough . . . it works!!

The last several Home Furnishings Markets offered Wanek's an unusual number of special car load and truck load purchases, and as Wanek's vast warehousing system provided the necessary storage, we were able to take advantage of some exceedingly outstanding buys that we will be able to pass on to you at uncommonly low prices.

While others talk about spiraling costs, we at Wanek's are continuing to work every day to decrease our percentage of overhead, without sacrificing service to our customers.

The result? Wanek's are still able to offer you whatever you need in top brand Furniture, Carpeting, Appliances, Color TV & Stereo at sound reasonable prices!

Now our volume is growing even more rapidly than our overhead, so Wanek's can continue to operate without raising our margin of profit, in some cases, we even lower it!

We know it sounds improbable that Wanek's keep looking for ways to lower prices, while others are raising them, yet shopping Wanek's will prove to you that we are succeeding in our efforts to keep a full selection at the lowest possible prices. But don't take our word for it, shop around and compare, or ask your friends and neighbors, they can tell you all about Wanek's selection, savings and outstanding service.

Inflation . . . Shortages . . . or whatever, we at Wanek's still feel that our customers deserve the very best in Home Furnishings at fair prices . . . and we're going to keep right on finding ways to bring them to you!

Flooded Bangladesh Gets Little Help

(c) By New York Times
Dacca, Bangladesh — Flood-devastated Bangladesh is desperately seeking help to pull through a devastating calamity of epidemics and famine.

"Without assistance from friendly countries," said Abdul Monin, minister for relief and rehabilitation, "anything might happen."

What has frightened the government of this new nation, which was formerly part of Pakistan, is not so much the floods as their aftermath.

The mighty Himalayan rivers, the Ganges, the Meghina and the Brahmaputra, which flow through Bangladesh and into the bay of Bengal, rose simultaneously in recent weeks, flooding two-thirds of the country. Some 80% of the summer crop was destroyed along with the seedlings planted for the main winter crop.

Officials estimate that at least 40% of the annual food output of 12 million tons was lost in the floods, which are finally subsiding after nearly a month. The country already imports two million tons of grain a year to help feed its 75 million people.

To provide relief to about three million people who have been uprooted by the floods and are now living in government relief centers, 700,000 tons of grain are needed.

Monin said that in response to appeals, half a dozen countries, including the United States, had given "token" aid. Only 4,000 tons of grain have been promised, mostly by the United Nations World Food Program. The rest of the aid is medicine, milk powder and cloth.

The United States contributed $25,000.

However, Monin said that he was pleased at reports quoting a State Dept. spokesman as having said that the United States would be "very active" in helping Bangladesh recover from the floods.

Already the government led by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, seems at the brink of economic disaster. Prices have risen two and a half times since independence and rice and other essential commodities are becoming increasingly scarce and costly.

Foreign observers say that now even a small deterioration in food supplies can have serious consequences.

A boy rows his weeping mother to safety on a makeshift raft as they abandon their flooded home in a village near Myrnsing, Bangladesh.

Several reasons are given for the sluggish response to appeals for foreign help. Many governments are said to have tired of frequent distress calls from Bangladesh.

Some say that relief goods are misappropriated by corrupt officials and intermediaries and that the Bangladesh government is exaggerating the situation to get more foreign aid.

Foreign observers feel that there may be substance in these allegations but the fact that Bangladesh is "so down and out" that she cannot fend for herself in any abnormal situation is a fact.

Krum Hensen, secretary general of the International Committee of the Red Cross, who is on an emergency visit here, has described the Bangladesh situation as "a challenge to mankind." He says the people of the country will need "total support for a long time."

Toledo, Ohio (AP) — Becky Schroeder of Toledo was waiting in the car for her mother to finish shopping when the idea came to her.

"I was in the car doing my homework when it started to get dark," the 12-year-old girl said in an interview Friday. "I kept thinking what a good thing it would be if people could write in the dark."

On Aug. 27, the U.S. Patent Office will give Becky's "luminescent writing sheet" the number 3,832,656.

Her invention is a backing sheet with phosphorescent lines to be placed under writing paper. The lines enable a writer to write in straight lines without a light.

The eighth grader wrote in her patent application two years ago:

"I have found that a one-minute charge of light from an ordinary light bulb will provide enough visible phosphorescent lines which can be seen through ordinary writing paper in the dark for periods of 15 minutes or more."

The idea already has struck a responsive chord at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration which has expressed interest in adapting it for use on space trips, Becky says.

There was help around the house if she needed it. Her father, Charles F. Schroeder, is an inventor and a patent attorney here.

Santiago Least Expensive

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — Out of 86 cities around the world Santiago, Chile, is the least expensive for resident foreigners and Tokyo the most expensive, the United Nations said Saturday.

Figures in the monthly U.N. Bulletin of Statistics compares living costs for U.N. officials around the world and is used to calculate salaries. The report is based mostly on living cost figures of last March, April and May.

Using New York as a base of 100, Santiago's index was given as 45 and Tokyo's 135. Here are other samplings: Washington, 95; Vientiane, Laos, and Kuwait, both 100; Sydney and Jakarta, both 102; Ndjamena, Chad, and Kinshasa, Zaire, 106; Bunumbura, Burundi, 109; Vienna and Bamako, Mali, 110; Geneva, 117; Copenhagen, 118; The Hague, Netherlands, 120; Bonn, 126; Conakry, Guinea, 133.

She says it takes at least six weeks to get the complimentary tickets, given on a first-come, first-serve basis. When requesting tickets, tell the network the exact number of tickets you need and the exact time you will be in the area. Then keep your fingers crossed!

Speedy Discs

WOW Radio in Omaha often plays music much faster than its original recorded speed. I've even timed some records to prove my ears aren't playing tricks on me. I don't appreciate it when my favorite songs sound like they're being sung by a chipmunk quartet. Why the speed up?

— Rick H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Jimmy O'Neill, music director for WOW-AM radio, comments you for your "extremely keen ear." You're right, Rick, WOW does speed some discs from 45 r.p.m. to 48 when recorded on cartridges for playing on the air.

"We do it to make the record sound brighter," O'Neill said. "Take Rock and Roll Heaven by the Righteous Brothers, for example. Speeding that up doesn't change the sound significantly, it just makes the Brothers sound happier."

The "speedy discs" are within Federal Communications Commission regulations, he said, and most pop stations across the country use the sound tactic.

Shrinking Paper

With all the talk of a newsprint shortage, what's the idea of widening the interior pages of the Journal, the Star and the Sunday Journal and Star?

— Kevin Gillespie, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Quite the contrary is true, Kevin. The paper is shrinking in width.

Journal Star Printing Co. production manager Ed Roth says each page of the paper is now one-half inch narrower. This saves the paper 3% on the $264.65 a ton cost for newsprint. In addition, 30-pound paper has replaced the bulkier 32-pound weight for all three papers.

"We're trying to conserve newsprint as is almost every other paper in the country," he said.

Then what's the sheet of wider newsprint doing in every issue?

That's the leftovers from when the paper was wider. Roth says it'll be gone in another two months.

Do free stalls add up to discrimination? "To pay or not to pay" is begging question to Grand Island parkers.

Dixon Explains His Parking Meter Ruling: Grand Island's Ordinances Discriminatory

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Grand Island — Because one of his associate judges was on vacation, Hall County Judge Edward Dixon substituted in traffic court recently and happened to hear his first two cases alleging parking meter violations.

He dismissed both, saving the accused the customary $1 fine plus $8 court costs. Policeman Ron Chapman was the defendant on July 31, a young woman named Caroline Casarez on Aug. 2.

Then the judge offered an explanation which not only shook Grand Island but which ostensibly could threaten every parking meter in Nebraska.

The 1962 University of Denver law graduate contends that all of Grand Island's meter ordinances "violate the constitutions of both Nebraska and the United States" by being discriminatory. Appealed within hours by the city's legal department, the case appears to be a good prospect for eventually reaching the State Supreme Court.

Since Grand Island's meter situation apparently differs little from those of most cities, it follows that affirmation would make waves far beyond the Third City.

Dixon, in his ninth year as judge, is seemingly all the more zealous because of the ramifications.

"Meters are only a way of extracting revenue from people, not of enforcing parking as city officials claim," stated the onetime college footballer and wrestler, 35. "Parking could be adequately controlled under the one and two-hour zoning statutes which the city has and which are unquestionably legal."

Dixon's ruling, which triggered a series of sharp exchanges with City Manager John Carpenter, is based less upon meter rates than upon alleged discrepancies because of different types of meters.

With the apparent exception of one lone meter which levies a nickel for 30 minutes, the universal rate is a nickel per hour. Neither the one-hour nor two-hour meters have a slot for pennies, however, making a five-cent minimum for even a few minutes' parking.

The judge also noted that approximately five business blocks along Fourth St., just north of the Union Pacific trackage which bisects the downtown area, are "completely meterless."

Dixon: Unequal

He interprets as "unequal classification" the fact that businesses of the same type are bordered by different types of meters. For example, he explained, four 12-minute meters are provided for telephone company customers, while none is located beside the natural gas company office.

"Still a third utility, the city light department, is given four stalls of 15-minute free parking," he continued. "I say that is definitely discriminatory and unconstitutional."

Dixon said he would have announced similar reasoning in regard to the Chapman case except that "this would have embarrassed city hall." He explained that a one-hour, 45-minute hearing brought forth evidence that the police department had been permitting officers on its 3-11 p.m. shift to park free.

When the policy of "tearing up their tickets" was abolished, Dixon said, a group of officers used the complaint on Chapman's unpaid ticket as a test case.

"I dismissed the case after learning that the top man in the city's chain of command (City Manager Carpenter) was parking free in the police garage," reflected Dixon. "That's what really got me to thinking about meters, and the Casarez case just happened to come up two days later while I was still substituting."

Although Dixon said his office staff refused to accept a writ of prohibition issued Aug. 7 by District Judge Donald Weaver, he said "this doesn't mean that I won't comply with it." The city requested writ — something of a legal rarity — specifically ordered Dixon to issue no further orders on the meter case.

Following his basic decision, Dixon established trust accounts for the handling of meter revenues and fines. He also ordered the city to issue a news release informing the public that his court would dismiss any meter violations.

in Beatrice, said Dixon's ruling was a "complete surprise" to city officials. He and Carpenter expressed confidence that the appeal will bring a reversal in district court.

"Our rate is the same nickel-per-hour throughout town and I don't believe there is a city in the country which has meters posted at every single stall," the city attorney explained. "Also, the constitutionality of meters was upheld in one Nebraska case at McCook as well as in some 20 other states."

He acknowledged, however, that Grand Island has $116,661 in bonded indebtedness on four off-street parking lots which depends upon meter revenues. While meter revenue goes largely for this use, meter fine money goes to the local school district — the same as in all other Nebraska cities.

Ahlschwede said the judge's order forced him to hold up prosecution of 44

Judge Edward Dixon meter violation complaints. But he noted, state law allows a year for processing such complaints.

Both the city attorney and Police Chief Tom Smaha said Grand Island's two meter maids are handing out overtime tickets as usual. They said there has been "no noticeable decrease" in collections from the 547 on-street meters. Meters in off-street parking lots, which give two hours' parking for a nickel, are not at issue.

The district court writ instructed Dixon to appear Sept. 9 to show cause why he "should not be constrained from any further proceedings" in the case. Dixon said by that date it will be a moot question, since the transcript of the appeal already will have been filed.

Assuming the judgeship here in 1965, Dixon has two associates, Steve Hinman and Patricia Sanford. He was sitting in for Hinman when he made the Casarez ruling.

Covering Hall County only, incidentally, their court had the heaviest load in the state in fiscal 1973-74 with 11,900 cases.

Obering: Diverting Funds to Centrum Will Not Affect Street Improvements

The head of Lincoln's Public Works Dept. says diversion to the Centrum project of funds normally used for street improvements will not affect the street program.

Bob Obering said the diversion is for another kind of improvement: off-street parking. Anyway, he added, the city has no big street jobs under way. Major improvement and construction projects are in the planning and design stages and will not be off the drawing boards for several more years.

Being diverted are highway user fees — the city's share of state motor vehicle fuel taxes and auto registration fees. The decision was based on the fact that the money won't be needed for street work at the time it will be used for Centrum financing, Obering said. That is why Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf budgeted it in that manner.

Lincoln is channeling $1.8 million of the $3.4 million in highway user fees it receives from the state into the Centrum project, a combination parking garage and retail shopping area. Next year, the city will use another $500,000 for the parking garage, the city's portion of the facility to be constructed on the downtown block bounded by O and N Sts. between 11th and 12th.

Also financing the $7.4 million Centrum project will be federal revenue-sharing funds and revenue bonds the city plans to issue when the municipal bond market improves. The market is now hampered by high interest rates.

In the past, the city has always used highway user money for street improvements and construction, although under state law the funds can be used for a variety of purposes, including off-street parking.

3 New Routes To Help Lincolniters Leave the Driving to Bus System

One week from tomorrow, Lincoln commuters will have three new reasons for leaving the driving to the city bus system.

The Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) will add three new routes to its service schedule.

All three of the new routes will be served with the new minibuses delivered to LTS last month.

One new route, dubbed the O Street Special by LTS officials, will offer express service along O St. between the central business district and 70th St. According to LTS Manager Dick Frank, the O St. route is designed to be a "shoppers' special."

The bus will leave 10th and O Sts. hourly on the half-hour between 9:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. and travel east to 33rd St.

After reaching 33rd St. the bus will go into express operation with no further stops until reaching the Gateway Shopping Center. From Gateway, the bus will drive on to 70th St. and then make the return trip downtown.

The second new route will be a shuttle line through the Briarhurst residential area near 56th St. and Hwy. 2.

The bus will circle through an area between 40th and 56th Sts. and take passengers to and from the regular Irving School route stop at 40th and LaSalle Sts.

The Briarhurst shuttle service will operate mornings between 6 and 9:30 and afternoons between 3 and 6:30.

The third new bus route will be the Crosstown service to run north and south along the city's eastern border.

The Crosstown route will begin at 48th and Greenwood Sts. and travel south to Vine St. Then the bus will travel east on Vine to Cotner Blvd., on to the Gateway Shopping Center and finally south to 48th St. and Pioneer Blvd. The return trip will follow the same route, with another stop at Gateway.

LTS Manager Frank said all three new routes will cost the regular 30-cent fare and a free transfer to the Irving School route will be provided to riders on the Briarhurst Shuttle.

The new routes, approved recently by the LTS administrative board, will be tried on a six-month trial basis.

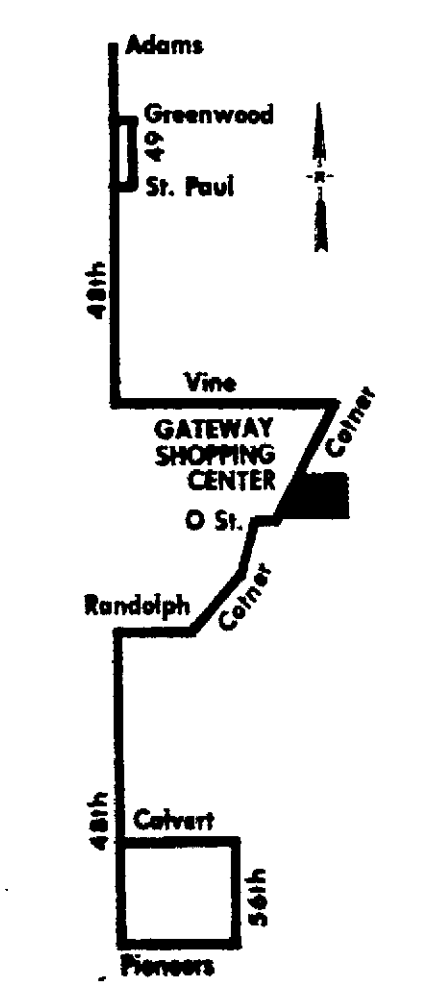

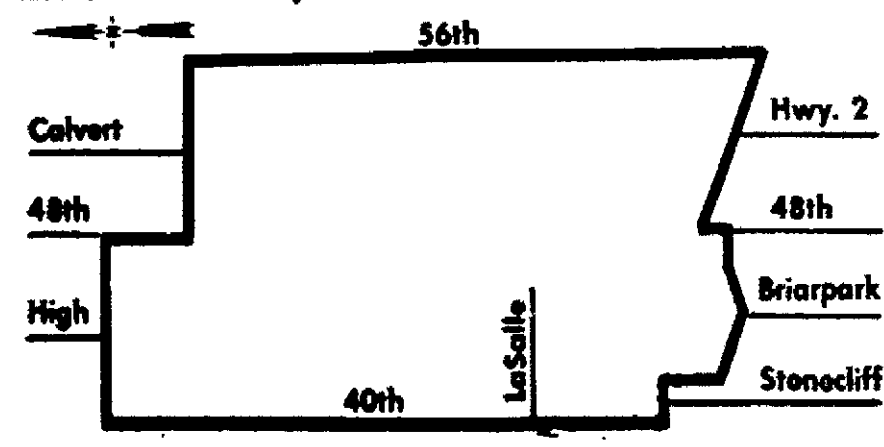

If the test shows positive results, Frank said, the City Council will be asked to approve permanent implementation of the new routes.

The minibuses to be used on the new routes have a capacity of 19 passengers.

If they become overloaded — and LTS officials are hoping for just that to happen — additional minis will be put into service along the new routes.

Detailed schedules and route maps will be available from LTS.

Twisters, Winds, Hail Lash State

From News Wire

At least two persons were injured Saturday as high winds, tornadoes, hail and rain lashed portions of central and eastern Nebraska.

Howard County officials said two men, Harold Craig, and his son, Gary were admitted to the Howard County Hospital at St. Paul after a tornado or high winds severely damaged the house they were working in about seven miles north of St. Paul.

According to early reports, Craig suffered a possible fractured leg, the son multiple injuries. Both men were listed in good condition after X-rays and admittance procedures were completed.

The two men were working in the cellar of the older house, which was moved to the site and set on the foundation Friday.

Sheriff's officers said the house was blown from 12-15 feet off the foundation, and fell into the cellar, trapping the two men.

It took rescue workers more than an hour to free the pair.

The house was extensively damaged. A twister touched down briefly about five miles west of Clay Center late Saturday morning, but no damage or personal injuries were reported. Observers in the Clay Center area also reported half-inch hail.

Hail the size of golf balls fell on the western outskirts of Grand Island, and several tornadoes were indicated by radar just to the northwest and southeast of the city. Again, no damage or personal injuries were reported.

Another funnel cloud was spotted between Geneva and Tobias, but the twister apparently didn't touch down.

At Scotia, high winds blew down several trees, and observers said heavy rains and hail fell. About 1.60 inches of rain fell in a 40-minute period.

Winds ranging from 70 to 80 m.p.h. were reported at Bradshaw and 55 m.p.h. winds with half-inch hail was reported just west of York.

At Seward, rain gauges recorded 2.36 inches of rain in a 20-minute span.

High winds also struck Central City about 11:15 a.m., ripping the roof off a cafe and uprooting trees. Power was also out in the city for several hours, but by mid-afternoon, Hamilton County deputies said the storm had apparently passed, and clean up operations were underway. Walnut-sized hail was also reported in the Central City area along with some severe crop damage.

At Polk, high winds downed power lines, uprooted trees, damaged one building and blew the steeple off a church. Hail the size of golfballs was also reported along with heavy rains.

At Tobias, high winds that hit at noon damaged trees. A large chunk of hail reportedly broke a window.

Utica reported three-quarter-inch hail, and Beaver Crossing reported uprooted trees.

A heavy thunderstorm produced marble to walnut-sized hail about one mile east of Hazard, hail and heavy rains were reported at Napoleon, and marble-sized hail was reported at Hastings.

A storm spotter, one mile east of Ansley, in eastern Custer County, reported heavy rains and hail in excess of one-inch in diameter.

At Alda, a fast-moving thunderstorm line prompted officials to sound the city's storm warning sirens.

Omaha also received a good dousing, with pea-sized hail reported in some western suburbs.

Heavy hail was reported at both Steele City and Jansen near the Kansas border. The Jefferson County sheriffs department said windows were knocked out by hail in Steele City, and a number of trees were stripped.

A tornado struck a barn near Endicott on the John Thorp, Sr. farm, but no injuries were reported.

Baseball-sized hail was reported in Saline County.

Cold Storage Building Chars In Crete Fire

Crete volunteer firefighters had a blaze in a cold storage building at 15th and Main Sts. under control within a half-hour after sparks began flying there early Saturday afternoon.

Crete Volunteer Fire Dept. Chief Norman Savery said fire broke out in the old Fairmont creamery, now being used for bulk cold storage, about 1 p.m.

Two rooms housing offices and scales were badly charred before 20 Crete volunteers brought the fire under control, he said. Fire did not reach the storage area.

Savery listed the probable cause of the fire as electrical in nature, but he declined to give a damage estimate.

Volunteers continued to keep a watchful eye on the building Saturday night for fear the fire might spark again.

Washington Perspective

Report Claims Feds Weak in Wheat Deal

Washington — The Soviet grain transaction, involving the sale of nearly one billion bushels of wheat, corn and other grains, was a classic case of "government by passivity and indifference."

This finding, which underscores the basic fault of governmental tunnel vision, is woven into the 67-page report recently released by the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

Although the Congress can legislate more laws, the report declares in effect, they will be useless if the policy-makers and the bureaucracy are not properly attuned to the full impact of their actions.

The result, as the Soviet grain sale pointed up, will be only "public confusion (and) waste of taxpayers' dollars." A third ingredient, that of higher food prices, is usually detected also because of short-sightedness.

Unfortunately, a somewhat cynical staff aide remarked, President Gerald Ford will soon find out that despite the best of intentions, it will be impossible to "outlaw passivity and indifference even in his Administration nor will judgments be limited to only past administrations."

Affects Nebraska

"In implementing programs to carry out the farm export policies," the report commented with pertinence to Nebraska farmers, "the Federal Government, particularly the Department of Agriculture, failed to operate efficiently; and certain Agriculture Department officials failed to exercise good judgment in performance of their duties."

Detailed in the report were nightmares of "how, in pursuit of a worthwhile goal, government programs and officials can go astray."

All aspects of the grain sales were ineptly managed, it said: "At the heart of the government failures... was an attitude of passivity and indifference, an assumption that the Federal role had only to do with promoting the sale of agricultural products."

Continuing, the report chided:

"It was (their) responsibility... to see to it that the grain sales were a benefit to the nation as a whole; that the sales had minimum negative impact on the economy; that their effect on the nation's transportation system did not cause disruption of ordinary commerce and that the grain sales did not cause more inflation."

Government Failed

"The government failed to meet this responsibility. The nation found itself with a shortage of farm products, with freight movements in some sections of the country brought to a virtual standstill, with unprecedented rises in the cost of food and with more inflation. A federal policy aimed at improving international relations cannot be termed successful if it causes hardship in domestic affairs."

(That the government still hasn't learned is evident in the fact that U.S.D.A. has discontinued its grain freight car monitoring system.)

Specifically, the investigators found that government policy makers were bankrupt in their decisions because:

—No estimates were made as to how much the sales would cost the government in export subsidies.

—No study was made as to the effect on transportation systems in this country.

—Little interest was displayed as to the impact the sales would have on our own domestic economy, especially on shortages and prices.

"While Secretary Butz and others involved in the grain sales knew the transactions would affect domestic prices, they tended to minimize this effect and none of them bothered to seek to determine just how great the impact would be."

The subcommittee also found that pertinent reports crucial to heading off major problems which later developed were "dismissed as too pessimistic and buried in the files by Agriculture officials who prepared estimates as to potential foreign grain sales for distribution to the American agriculture community."

In short, it declared, the government failed "to make a thorough examination of all the pertinent factors and then try to prepare for the possibility that something may go wrong, that the unexpected — or the undesired — might happen."

The curious here are anxious to determine just how much contingency planning the new Administration will do.

Lincoln Boy Runs Into Police Car

A three-year-old Lincoln boy was treated and released at Bryan Memorial Hospital Saturday night after running into a police cruiser, Lincoln police said.

Police said Officer Mark Lantis was going south on Limestone when Scott T. Panagiotis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Panagiotis, 5510 Limestone, ran out into the street. Lantis applied his brakes and swerved, but the child ran into the right front fender of the cruiser, according to police.

Children in the area said they had been playing hide-and-seek before the mishap. The children told police that Scott had been hiding near a parked pickup truck just before he ran out into the street.

Police said the mishap occurred shortly after 8:00 p.m. near the Panagiotis residence.

Elderly High Rise Plan Faces City Council Delay

The Lincoln Housing Authority's controversial proposal to build a high-rise apartment for the elderly will come before the City Council again Monday.

But a decision on it may be postponed for a second time since three council members will be absent when the council meets.

A decision on the proposal was stymied by a 3-3 vote last week. The issue in the controversy is the proposed site of the facility at L St. and Haverford Dr.

Residents of the proposed construction site contend the facility would have a detrimental effect on their neighborhood. Council members Sue Bailey and Helen Bevels say they are opposed to the site because shopping areas are not close by and it would be difficult for residents to obtain retail services.

Councilman Steve Cook was absent last week and was expected to be the swing vote, but now his colleagues Mrs. Bailey, Bob Sikyta and Max Denney will be absent from Monday's meeting. This means the matter may bog down again.

Also on Monday's City Council agenda are:

Second Reading Public Hearing
Paving Dist. — Creating in L St. between 46th and 48th Sts.
Water Dist. — Creating in 27th, Cornhusker Hwy.
Graveling Dist. — Creating in alley between Mulberry and Plum Sts. and from 14th, 15th Sts.
Water Dist. — Creating in 2nd St. from Q to R, and in R from 1st to 2nd Sts.
Change of Zone — Amending city code relating to special permits for mobile home courts to provide additional requirements for design standards.
Change of Zone — Application of S. E. and M. E. Coppel for change from L Heavy Industrial to A-2 Single Family west of Burlington Northern Railroad and north of West Q St.
Building Materials — Amending

This is the third year for the drive in the Lincoln area. Last year's drive raised $5,325. Money raised will go to 41 private, predominantly black colleges supported by the fund.

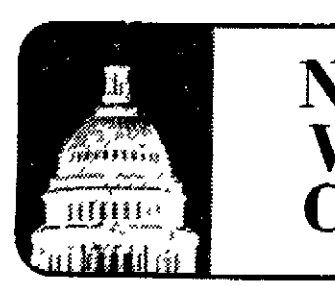

Dobson said the campaign will seek contributions from businesses, foundations and individuals.

Nebraska Votes in Congress

Washington — Votes of area members of Congress on key roll calls for the week ending August 15, 1974.

Senate

Gruman Advance Payments — The Senate voted 53-35 to disapprove a proposed Navy contract with the Gruman Aerospace Corp., maker of the F-14 fighter plane, that would allow the Navy to make advance payments of $100-million to the company for construction costs. Controversy over the advance payments was heightened when it was learned that Gruman had used some of its previous advance payments to make a profit on short-term, high-yield investments.

Supporters of the disapproval move contended that Gruman's financial problems were its responsibility, and the government should not continue a "ball before it fails" policy.

Opponents said the advance payments would not cost the federal government money and that it was therefore unwise to risk the possible financial downfall of the company and loss of the F-14 planes.

President Gerald Ford did not take a position on the issue although the Defense Department had asked for approval of the contract.

Voting against advance payments: None.

House

Settlement Cost — By a 199-202 vote, the House removed the federal government's authority to set maximum settlement charges connected with buying or selling a home backed by federal mortgage guarantees.

Opponents of the law argued it should be repealed because it was vague, administratively unworkable and possibly unconstitutional. They urged new studies to find out if the federal government should control settlement charges.

Supporters of the existing law argued that, although never used, the law was a deterrent to increases in settlement charges. They said the charges, payable when a property changes hands, were high enough in some areas to spell the difference between being able or unable to buy a home.

Administrative officials have called the law impossible to implement on a national scale.

Voting to remove government settlement authority: McCollister (R), Martin (R), Thorne (R).

Mass Transit Operating Subsidies — On a close 197-202 vote, the House refused to cut from a $70.4 billion mass transit bill funds for day-to-day operating expenses of urban transit systems.

Supporters of the move to cut federal operating subsidies said subsidies would weaken local incentive to keep transit systems economical and would give already overpaid workers an excuse to make new inflationary wage demands.

Those opposed to cutting the subsidies contended that they were just as much in the national interest as the funds for construction of transit systems contained in the bill. Without a quick infusion of federal aid, they said, big cities like New York would be forced to raise fares to a level average citizens could not pay.

Voting to cut operating subsidies: McCollister (R), Martin (R), Thorne (R).

The evangelist group had to submit to a second search at Grand Island. Like the first, this one yielded nothing.

Van Stopped, Searched Twice on I-80

Washington Minister: Remove State Trooper From Patrol

By John Gleason
A Yakima, Wash., minister has asked the Nebraska State Patrol and Gov. J. J. Exon to remove a trooper from the ranks of the patrol because of two incidents on Interstate 80.

"I do not think that officer should be wearing a badge, and I'm going to try to do something about it," said The Rev. Ken Gaub.

The Rev. Mr. Gaub met with patrol officials Thursday and with Norman Otto, administrative assistant to the governor, Friday to file a protest concerning the two incidents.

He told officials he had no complaints about his treatment by other officers involved in the two incidents, but he was extremely critical of the attitude of the first officer he encountered.

The Rev. Mr. Gaub and his family comprise a singing gospel group and travel throughout the country year round to participate in evangelistic crusades.

The group was in Nebraska for a Thursday night appearance at the Glad Tidings Assembly of God Church, 12th and D Sts., in Lincoln.

The first incident occurred outside North Platte when the patrol pulled a van, used by the group to haul musical equipment, off the Interstate about 12:10 a.m. Thursday. The Rev. Mr. Gaub, who was driving a bus just ahead of the van, also pulled off to find out what the problem was.

He was told the patrol had information the van was being driven by drug dealers. He said he was astonished anyone could believe that.

The Rev. Mr. Gaub allowed patrol troopers to search the van for drugs and even suggested they search the bus. However, the troopers declined the latter suggestion and allowed the family to go on following the search. About 9:30 a.m., just outside Grand Island, the van was again flagged off the Interstate. The officers said they had a report the van was involved in drug dealing.

The Rev. Mr. Gaub said he had "just about had it" at this point, but when he was told the officers would impound the van and obtain a search warrant, he told them to search the vehicle rather than bear the delay and miss the church appearance in Lincoln Thursday night.

The Rev. Mr. Gaub said he was willing to forget the first incident and chalk it up as unfortunate, but, he said, he was convinced the second stop was caused by the officer he met first. He said this is the reason he made the appointments with the patrol administration and the governor's assistant and told the newspaper about the situation.

During the second stop, he took some pictures of the search and said a trucker who had stopped along the highway also took some pictures. He said the trucker was from the Sioux City area but declined to identify him.

Lt. Col. Elmer Kohmetscher told the Rev. Mr. Gaub he would investigate the matter thoroughly and order full reports filed.

Reports to Kohmetscher's office from western Nebraska established that some 20 minutes before the family was stopped, a call was made to the patrol at North Platte. The caller gave his name and a Sioux City address. He said the people driving a van with Florida plates and the words "Eternity Express" on the side were drug dealers. This message was broadcast on the patrol radio network, and the van was spotted and stopped.

About 20 minutes before the second incident occurred, the Grand Island police were called and given similar information. This, too, was broadcast on the patrol radio net and the Gaub's were stopped again.

Kohmetscher said the second caller gave the same last name but a different first name from that of the person who called the North Platte patrol headquarters. This individual also gave a Sioux City address.

"We have since checked the name and address out, but we were unable to find anyone living at the address by that name," Kohmetscher said.

After his meeting with Otto, the Rev. Mr. Gaub and his family left Lincoln for a Friday night appearance in Sioux City.

Kohmetscher said the patrol is not only trying to determine not only who made the telephone calls and why but is also following through on the Rev. Mr. Gaub's complaint concerning the trooper's attitude.

Otto said the governor's office will keep close tabs on the matter because it is always concerned about the treatment afforded visitors to Nebraska.

During his discussions with Kohmetscher, the Rev. Mr. Gaub said he couldn't think of anyone who is his enemy and would want to discredit him.

A move by the Nebraska Public power District (NPPD) to compromise with other power districts, rural utilities and municipalities apparently will defuse a scheduled repeat next year of the bruising battle over a public power bill that took place in the 1974 Legislature.

NPPD, in non-public negotiating sessions with other utility representatives, has apparently agreed to a bill that would allow power districts, rural or munys of join in any combination they chose to build, own or operate both power generating plants and transmission lines.

NPPD had been willing to let such a bill dealing only with generating plants pass without its concentrated opposition. But up until recent days, it was adamant that rurals and munys be kept out of the transmission business.

Many rurals and most munys were just as adamant that they were going to do everything they could to see a bill authorizing them to get into the transmission business, if they so choose.

NPPD's apparent willingness to compromise means the power industry can present a united front on this issue when it makes an appearance Wednesday at the initial public hearing of Sen. Richard Lewis' interim study committee on public power.

Flood Control Problems

The hard facts of economic life, coupled with more widely accepted concepts on flood control, apparently have led some to believe the Platte River Basin Study is somehow being stacked in favor of not building flood control dams and reservoirs.

That complaint from Pierce County residents has triggered reaction from Washington on down.

What started the mini-tempest is the fact preliminary reports on findings of the study, sponsored by the Missouri River Basin Commission and the state, do not recommend as many dams and reservoirs as local people would like.

And the reason the reports don't recommend many dams is that they can't be justified on an economic basis under stringent federal guidelines.

As Chris Garvey, chief of the special projects branch, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, pointed out recently, it's hard to find proposed flood control reservoirs in the Platte River Basin — which covers over half of Nebraska — that can be justified on economic grounds.

And Warren Patefield, a member of the Nebraska Natural Resources Commission, said national flood control leaders are moving away from the idea that dams and reservoirs are the answer to controlling flooding.

The consensus at a recent Flood Plain Management Conference in Washington was that management often is more desirable than building structures, he said.

Such management can take the form of non-development, leaving areas subject to flooding for such uses as parks and other things not susceptible to severe flood damage.

LES-NPPD Talks

The Lincoln Electric System (LES) and NPPD have had committees of their respective boards meeting for about seven months in a renewed attempt to resolve differences between the utilities that have already led to two lawsuits.

To date, commented LES board member Tom Allman, progress in settling LES-NPPD differences is going along just as if there were no negotiating committees.

Allman said he does not think LES is losing ground, adding that he has hopes from time to time that differences will be resolved voluntarily.

LES Board Chairman John Haessler pointed out that the LES-NPPD management fee is the type of thing that "rubs salt in wounds" in the utilities' relationship.

NPPD once managed LES. However, LES employees now run the whole show, and NPPD provides no services to the city, LES officials maintain.

But under terms of a contract, NPPD collects a management fee that is a percent of LES revenues, with a minimum of $125,000 a year and a maximum of $250,000 a year. For fiscal 1973-74, NPPD will collect about $140,000.

Haessler said that while LES is legally bound to pay the money under terms of the contract — and in fact is paying it — NPPD provides no management services of any kind to LES to justify payment of any money.

Statehouse Perspective

By John Barrette

Miss Helen Griess retired this year after more than 30 years of service to the state. Approximately the last 20 of those years were spent working on Nebraska's "Blue Book." She edited 10 of those volumes, which are published every two years.

The "Blue Book" is an invaluable tool for anyone researching virtually any aspect of Nebraska government. Editing the book is a monumental task.

In the 1972 edition was this tribute from the Legislative Council's director of research, Jack W. Rodgers: "As has been the case for a number of years, the entire task of preparing and editing this volume has been performed by Miss Helen S. Griess, research associate of the Nebraska Legislative Council. This year, as in the past, this task has been 'well done.'"

Party Held

Her associates held a party for Helen June 28 to express appreciation for her years of work and her friendship. There was cake, a meritorious service award from Gov. J. J. Exon and the usual gold pin.

In the area that counts, however, Helen gets $73 a month in retirement benefits from her state pension, to which she contributed the past 10 years.

She's not complaining. Helen Griess isn't that type. But the fact remains it would take 43 years for Helen Griess to match the "pension" enjoyed — thanks to the Unicameral and its Legislative Council's Executive Board — by Hugo Srb.

At the $73 a month Helen said she will receive for retirement, it would take more than 520 months for her to get $38,000.

That's the amount Srb was paid over 33 months to write a book about the Unicameral. Srb is the retired clerk of the Legislature, a post he held 32 years.

Srb is still working on the book after almost five years. There is no suggestion in all this that Srb did anything wrong. If he completes the task, his part of the contract is fulfilled.

Contrast Evident

But the contrast between the pension of Miss Griess and the salary paid Srb is evident.

It exists even though Omaha Sen. Eugene Mahoney took a compassionate view of the Srb salary when he recently called it a "poor pension, if anything."

Mahoney's comment came during a board meeting at which members made no move to investigate the unfinished book project even though a fellow senator sought such a probe.

Nor did the board talk of any corrective legislation or rules changes to prevent such lucrative contracts in the future.

Instead, the matter was discussed briefly and shelved after Mahoney said Srb's salary was a way for the clerk emeritus to retire gracefully with a small token of appreciation for his years of service to the state.

If Mahoney's analysis is valid, a couple of questions come to mind.

Where were the Legislature and the Executive Board with their generous pension attitude when Helen Griess stepped down after putting out 10 books on not only the Unicameral, but all of Nebraska government?

And where, in the absence of such equal treatment, is the rationale for the legislative action in the Srb case?

Miss Griess and countless other unheralded workers in the vineyards of state government might hope Srb's salary — now called a pension — would become the standard rather than the exception.

But Nebraska taxpayers are unlikely to share such a generous legislative attitude when they must foot the bill.

LASAP Report

Drinkers on Probation Return to Court Less

Problem drinkers placed on probation have a statistically significantly lower recidivism rate than those who are jailed or fined, according to a study made by the Lincoln Alcohol Safety Action Project (LASAP).

The study was prepared as part of the city's contract with the U.S. Transportation Dept. It showed that only 3.2% of the problem drinkers placed on probation were arrested again for driving while intoxicated.

In contrast, 8.9% of the problem drinkers who accepted straight court sentences were rearrested for driving while intoxicated.

The report also indicated that non-problem drinkers placed on probation had a 1.2% recidivism rate as compared to 4.6% for non-problem drinkers who did not receive probation.

LASAP said nearly 70%, 448 of the 636 persons, who received pre-sentence investigations during 1973 as a result of a driving while intoxicated arrest were diagnosed as problem drinkers.

In terms of client occupation and income, 56% of the clients were blue collar workers and 50% claimed a net household income of $150 or more per week.

UNL to Study Capitol Planning

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln, in cooperation with several state and local agencies, will undertake a study leading to the development of a master plan for the State Capitol Building and its environs.

The project will be carried out by the College of Architecture's Community Resource and Research Center (CRRC) and has been made possible by a $44,000 matching grant from the National Endowment for the Arts City Options Program. The project has been designated a "Bicentennial Activity".

Roger L. Schluntz, associate professor of architecture, will direct the project.

"The Nebraska State Capitol," Schluntz said, "has been as one of the architectural masterpieces of the United States. It was designed by Bertram G.

Goodhue and constructed in the 1920's.

"During the past 50 years, however, the building has been subjected to deleterious decisions concerning the site and the urban development of the surrounding area.

"The original siting potential has been dramatically restricted, avenues and vistas only partially exist, landscape planning and maintenance has been ineffective, competing high-rise structures have been permitted near the Capitol tower and parts of the surrounding residential neighborhood is deteriorating with resultant inflated land values," Schluntz said.

Matching in-kind services will be provided by the University, several city departments, the State Historical Society and the Nebraska Chapter of the American Institute of Architects. The project has been endorsed in resolutions of the Nebraska State Legislature and the Lincoln City Council. The Nebraska Arts Council has also given its support to the project. Schluntz said plans call for an in-depth study of the Capitol environs which will include land use, building heights, views and vistas, pedestrian and vehicular traffic movement, maintenance of the Capitol building and development of the major axial streets which focus on the Capitol.

To carry out the project, Schluntz said a team will be formed which will consist of NU faculty, practicing professionals, government employees and advanced architecture and planning students. The team will study alternatives and delineate a development plan for the environs of the State Capitol Building.

Liability Coverage

Lancaster Board to Take Bids

Bids will be received by Lancaster County commissioners Tuesday on a liability coverage package for the county.

Consultants, after three-months study, recommended last May that the commissioners solicit bids from national and international brokers for the county's insurance.

They told the commissioners that they were not critical of the firm now handling the bulk of the county's coverage but that they felt the county would get the "best deal" by soliciting bids from a broad area.

The board will also receive Tuesday a report on the county's retirement plan from consultant Steve Kellison.

The plan has drawn criticism from county employees due to a substantial loss in earnings on the investment last year and the commissioners agreed to look into the situation for them.

Other agenda items include:
—Action on request by General Electric to move terminal over county roads.
—Request by Waverly Fire Dept. for payment of fire runs.
—Agreement for installation of railroad crossing automatic signals at Burlington Northern crossing west of Waverly.

Cedars Home Annual Dinner Set Friday

Some 600 friends of Cedars Home for Children, from New Jersey to Los Angeles, will gather in Lincoln Friday night for the annual dinner and recognition meeting of the Honorary Trustees Assn. of the home.

Asa Waters, Cedars Home executive director, said 43 supporters from outside Nebraska have made reservations for the dinner at 6:30 p.m. at the Radisson Cornhusker. Another 67 contributors from Nebraska, outside Lincoln, will attend, he said.

Dr. Ronald W. Roskens, chancellor of the University of Nebraska-Omaha, will speak. Musical entertainment will be provided by the Young Americans 4-H Club.

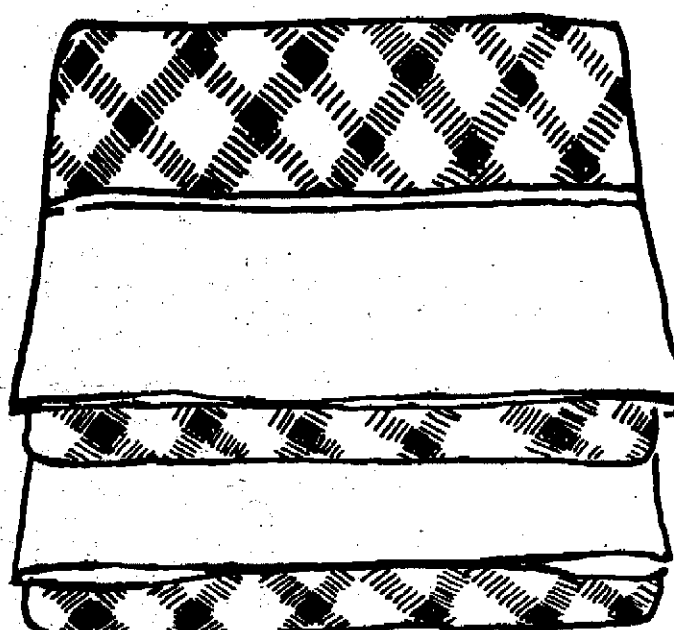

Special awards will be made to persons who have made extraordinary contributions to Cedars in the past year.

A seminar on estate planning, conducted by banking officials, will precede the dinner at 5:30 p.m.

Twister, Thunderstorms Slash Northeast Kansas

Kansas City (AP) — At least one tornado lashed the ground as a widespread front of thunderstorms ripped across northeast Kansas Saturday, causing heavy damage to buildings, trees and power lines.

Residents at Williamsburg, 15 miles southwest of Ottawa in Franklin County, said a tornado hit their small town.

Sheriff Lewis Ashcraft said he had no reports of injuries at Williamsburg. A large semitrailer truck was flipped over, four mobile homes were overturned, a house was unroofed and numerous other houses were damaged severely. Trees were blown down.

U.S. 50 was blocked east of Williamsburg by broken power lines.

A death was attributed to a storm near Manhattan, Kan., where Floyd Myers, 62, was electrocuted by a broken power line at his home.

Three persons were reported missing in the Kansas River after their boat capsized during a storm between Ft. Riley and Manhattan. Five persons in three boats were involved, and two of them reached safety and called for help.

Army helicopters from Ft. Riley joined in the search along the river.

Sheriff Lawrence Martin at Marysville, Kan., said he was requesting help from the Consumer groups had argued the FPC ruling would double or even triple the cost of natural gas to consumers over the next few years.

The FPC said open market pricing was necessary to stimulate natural gas production, which was in short supply even before the now lifted Arab oil embargo.

The commission retained the right to review each individual rate increase and order a reduction if any rate appears too high.

Appeals Court Upholds Fluctuating Gas Costs

Washington (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals has upheld a Federal Power Commission (FPC) decision allowing natural gas producers to set prices for sales to pipeline companies.

In a 21-page opinion, the three-judge court said Friday that "further aggravation of the gas supply problem... portends grave implications for the nation's economic objectives."

Energy experts have said that many homeowners will face the possibility of heating shortages during coming winters unless potential natural gas areas are developed. The commission estimated that perhaps 1,178 to 2,100 trillion cubic feet — perhaps 50 to 90-year supply at present usage levels — remains to be tapped in this country.

Opponents of the FPC ruling said it gives no assurances the gas companies will use the additional money they may receive

Drouth Conditions Force Cattle Off Forest Lands

Chadron (UPI) — Because of drouth conditions, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Service has advised ranchers to remove livestock early this year from many national forest grazing allotments.

Charges to Be Filed Against Hill — Knowles

Noting that the drouth conditions were prevailing in much of the Sandhills, Merle Prince, Nebraska national forest supervisor, said the McKelvie National Forest southwest of Valentine was especially hard hit, along with the Nebraska National Forest near Halsey.

Soft, sandy soil in both these areas, Prince said, makes it necessary to remove livestock before the native grass cover was grazed to the point where the sandy soils were exposed to winter winds.

But conditions on the Pine Ridge were better, Prince said. Recent rains have eased the situation, and there will probably be no need for livestock removal from national forest allotments on the Pine Ridge this fall, he said.

Omaha (AP) — Charges will be filed Monday against a 22-year-old former mental patient in connection with the 1970 slaying of Peggy Giddings, Douglas County Atty. Donald Knowles said Saturday.

Knowles said he has not decided what degree the charges will specify. Omaha police Saturday continued to probe the case against Richard A. Hill, described as a drifter with a history of psychiatric treatment. Hill is being held under guard at the Douglas County Hospital.

Miss Giddings was 18 years old when she was killed July 24, 1970.

Treasury Notes: Investors' Primer

By Gene Kelly

So you missed the dramatic auction last week of Treasury bills? Don't feel lonely. Lots of people are apparently wondering how to get in on this sort of thing.

The magic figure was 9% interest.

The event was the public auction of more than $4 billion in U.S. Treasury notes and bonds, carrying a 9% interest coupon.

The Nebraska reaction was a very substantial interest by investors — from the guy who had only $1,000, to banks which were bidding for their own portfolios — so much clamor for information, in fact, that bond departments of Lincoln banks and broker dealers were flooded with calls and visitors.

But investors aren't going to end up with a 9% yield on these fixed-income securities, due primarily to this strong public interest.

Because of unprecedented bidding, the effective yield of the 33-month notes, for example, was forced down to 8.59%.

The federal money-raising package offered 33-month and six-year notes at 9%, plus 25-year bonds (at 8 1/2%).

To give you some background, the U.S. Treasury borrows billions in the open market on a weekly basis, since it has a debt burden of $400 billion to constantly refinance.

But the small investor has usually been shut out of these best-buy securities: the minimum investment was $10,000.

Last week's auction of $4.3 billion in Treasury notes carried a 9% coupon — the amount of interest the Treasury will pay on their face amount. The 9% rate was a record for any Treasury offering.

The $1,000 Spark

But the actual return to investors depended on the demand for the notes and what investors were willing to bid for them, on an auction basis.

The notes and bonds were issued in amounts as low as $1,000.

This was the factor that really sparked public interest and caused many a small investor to withdraw his life savings to reinvest in T notes.

The Treasury has said that it may need further cash offerings like these special U.S. securities

Here's how to get in on these high-yielding, flexible securities in this age of jolting inflation later this year (perhaps in late September and mid-November).

The "back nine" issues, as they've been nicknamed, could be purchased from any Federal Reserve bank or branch.

There was plenty of traffic in the lobby of the Omaha Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City last week. "Sure, people had to wait," notes Vern Hoskinson, operations officer. "We're just not geared to process those forms in a large volume," he explained. And there normally is not such interest in the auction of government securities.

Treasury bonds and notes can be bought commission-free at Federal Reserve branches. But a 2% certified check must accompany mail bids.

In areas other than Omaha, a broker-dealer or bank will handle Treasury note purchases.

Not for Free

But they don't do it for free. The standard brokerage fee is $25 — whether you're buying a $1,000 note or one up to $100,000. But it's only $10 on notes larger than this.

Brokers say that a new customer in Treasuries should stop by their office, to fill out initial forms. They'll work with an old customer over the phone.

Bond officers and Federal Reserve officials said that many of those buying the government notes were working people in their 50s and 60s. A majority seemed to be unsure of the jargon connected with short-term bonds.

Bond people were flooded with calls: "They were knocking down the door for those cash offerings," one noted. "But our officers were worried that people didn't understand what buying Treasuries is all about."

An officer of the Omaha Fed. Branch noted that "few investors seem aware of how they can dispose of these notes if they need the money before the notes mature."

They must go to a secondary securities market to sell them, most likely at less than face value.

And there is a good chance that the final coupon interest paid will be slightly less than the 9% rate, due to their popularity among investors.

In this kind of auction, the demand dictates the true interest yield, but nobody pointed this out to the average small investor ahead of time.

Actually a $10 per $1,000 "premium" price was paid.

'Premium' Price

The premium bid was the result of the strong competition. Competitive bidders like banks and insurance companies averaged offers of $1,010 for each $1,000 bond. Some bid as high as $12.80 above the face amount.

Noncompetitive bidders ended up paying the same $10 per $1,000 premium. So in figuring the real interest rate you would get, you must take the 9% coupon rate ($90 a year) and figure this as a percentage of the price of $1,010. The result is 8.59% effective interest.

The same week the Treasury sold $1.75 billion in six-year notes at an 8.75% average yield. These carried a 9% coupon too. The average price was $1,011.30 for each $1,000 face amount, a record for a Treasury note sale.

On these federal securities, small investors submitted so-called noncompetitive tenders, which allows them to buy notes at the average price awarded at competitive bidding.

Bids for the notes are made mainly by securities dealers and dealer banks (often bidding for correspondent banks).

After securing a tender form for this special bond issue, the buyer decides on how many notes — up to $500,000 — he wants, and selects the denomination (either $1,000, $5,000, $10,000, $100,000 and $1 million, of course).

A certified check had to be provided by the buyer for at least 5% of that face amount.

When the auction results were available, investors called their dealer or the Fed to find out whether and how much more they owed. They then mailed the Fed a check for the difference.

The Tax Angles

Is the interest on government securities tax free?

Despite some media statements to the contrary, interest income is NOT exempt from federal income tax. These dividends ARE exempt from state and local taxes (including state income tax). Income from the notes IS subject to estate, inheritance, gift and excise taxes, whether federal or state, according to Treasury circulars.

The savings and loan (S&L) industry has been warning that the millions invested in these Treasury notes and in the new floating interest rate securities being issued by bank holding companies are draining deposits from their institutions.

Although some financial analysts are saying that mortgage rates have topped out, at a level bumping the state 9% usury level, local S&Ls have had little money to lend lately.

Since savings and loan associations are the source of most home mortgages today, the availability of $1,000 Treasury notes with in excess of 8% interest is being called destructive in S&L circles.

Double-digit inflation is not far from the thoughts of most housewives. Even economists find it hard to fault the consumer for seeking the highest return on his savings.

The Threshold

The small investor, even if he knows the intricacies of bidding on such securities, usually stumbles on the threshold of needing $5,000 or $10,000 as a minimum investment.

To further perturb the S&L people, the major bank holding companies are offering notes in small denominations (some of $1,000) at 10% and up.

Some S&Ls have begun a campaign to counteract this outflow of funds (often called disintermediation).

Four-year certificate of deposit (CD) accounts could yield a high return than the Treasury's 9% notes, they say — because such CDs often have interest that is compounded daily.

The highest interest a savings and loan is allowed to pay on a $1,000 certificate is 7 1/4% a year. But the saver can earn much more than this if the account is left undisturbed until maturity.

How much more? If the interest on such a certificate is left in the account for the full four years, the effective return to a saver averages 8.75% a year — better than the actual yield on the Treasury bills.

Then again, those who own Treasury bills can reinvest their dividends, and beat this figure.

As a matter of fact, the coupon on a Treasury note is meant to be clipped semi-annually and cashed at any national bank or member firm of the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE).

If you want further information, you can call:

Omaha Branch, Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City: 402-341-3610.

Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank: 816-881-2683.

Ask to speak to any officer.

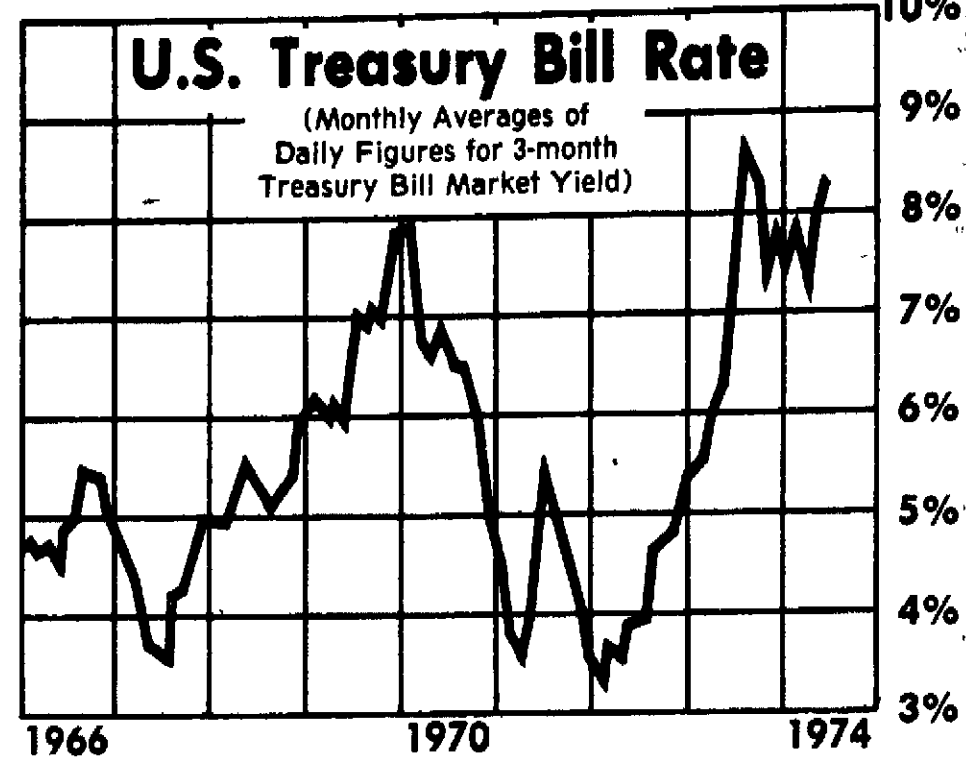

If you'd like to get in on other low-threshold federal securities, some with $1,000 minimums, get to know a securities salesman or bond department officer at a bank.

He may be willing to alert you to them, although they're not widely publicized because the dealer, frankly, just breaks even on handling them. Most are obligation notes of federal agencies.

Investing Strategies Change Profoundly

By Chet Currier

New York (AP) — Commercial paper, Treasury bills. Floating interest rate long-term notes.

A few years ago they were obscure concepts in specialized corners of the financial world. Today they are as likely to come up in cocktail party conversation as Watergate or "The Exorcist."

What has made the difference is inflation, and one of inflation's key by-products, high interest rates.

Indeed, the surge in the cost of living — 8.8% last year, an even higher rate this year — is changing the approach Americans take toward investing as profoundly as it is altering their spending habits.

Record high interest rates have lured many newcomers into the short term money markets, where banks, industrial corporations and the government borrow from each other through such instruments as Treasury bills, commercial paper and certificates of deposit.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, part of the nation's central banking system, reports receiving more than one thousand phone queries a week this summer for information about Treasury bills and other interest-bearing government securities. This is double the number of queries received last summer.

Treasury bills, with interest rates this year ranging from 7 to 9%, are the instruments the Federal government uses to borrow money for short periods, normally three months to a year.

Certificates of deposit, which banks issue to acquire money, and commercial paper, through which big business borrows, generally require a minimum investment of $100,000. But small investors, attracted by the 10%-plus yields this year, have found ways to buy.

Some have simply pooled their money, the way members of stock market investment clubs do, appointing an individual or committee to manage the money.

Others have gone to the half-dozen or so new mutual funds that specialize in the currently lucrative money markets. These funds invest the money they receive in securities and pass interest payments along to individual shareholders, in the same way that many other funds operate in the stock market.

Money-Market Funds

The Reserve Fund, the largest of the new money-market funds, has acquired assets of over $250 million from investors in the less than two years it's been operating, according to Lipper Analytical Services, which keeps track of mutual fund performance.

Michael Lipper, president of Lipper Analytical, says money-market funds are drawing a considerable amount of "indecisive money" — the capital of people who can't figure out, in the present inflation-clouded climate, any better place to put it at the moment.

For the investment community itself, the shift and flows of money create uncertainty and upheaval.

The National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, representing 482 savings banks in 17 states and Puerto Rico, reported that deposits in savings accounts declined by $480 million in the first six months of 1974. During the same 1973 period, there was a $1.5 billion net increase in deposits. A similar decline in deposits has been reported by savings and loan associations and other savings institutions whose deposits pay less than 6% interest.

Last year the New York Stock Exchange reported the first drop in decades in the number of investors in stocks. By contrast, the Chicago Board of Trade — the nation's largest commodity futures market — listed a 36.5% jump in contracts traded during 1973 compared with 1972. The trend continues this year.

Some of the money flowing out of the stock market and out of savings bank deposits is being invested in a new, controversial security: long-term notes with floating interest rates. They are notes that pay interest after the first 10 months and then semi-annually. The interest rate fluctuates one percentage point above an average interest rate for Treasury bills.

Citicorp, parent company of First National City Bank issued the first of these floating interest rate notes on July 24 — a $650 million, 20-year issue in denominations of $5,000 initially and $1,000 later. The opening interest rate was 9.7%. The notes can't be redeemed for two years. After that they can be cashed in every six months, or held the full 20 years.

The New York Bank for Savings, the nation's fourth largest savings bank, followed City Bank with an announced issue of $50 million in floating interest rate notes. It went on sale Aug. 14 and was quickly sold out.

Other banks and financial institutions are planning similar issues.

A depreciating dollar, meanwhile, has drawn other investors toward such "tangibles" as art, wine, silver coins and commodity futures — contracts for the future delivery of such things as soybeans or copper.

Many young people "are ready even to overspend a bit to get into things — things that they see as likely to be worth more tomorrow, unlike money," said James D. Farley, executive vice president in charge of retail banking at New York's First National City Bank.

Your Treasury Note A, B, Cs

If you've been yearning to know how to read the Treasury note list in your Lincoln newspaper, this little box aims to tell you how. The actual list appears in much smaller type.

Column A tells you the coupon rate, or the rate of annual interest being paid on each $1,000 of the note.

Column B lists the maturity date, by year and month.

Column C, labeled High, is the "asked price," or what a dealer would be willing to sell $100,000 or more of the bill for.

Column D, labeled Low, is the "bid price" or the price a dealer is willing to pay for bill lots of $100,000.

Column E, labeled 'close,' is the closing price of the last note sale that day.

How to Read Treasury Note Data

A	B	C	D	E	F	G
3 3/8s	1974 Nov	High	Low	Close	Chg	Yld
4s	1980 Feb	98.20	98.16	98.16	-2	9.55
3 1/2s	1980 Nov	76.20	76.12	76.12	+8	8.43
7s	1981 Aug	94.16	94.16	94.16		8.18
6 3/8s	1982 Feb	89.0	88.8	89.0	+24	7.79

Prices quoted in dollars and 32nds.

Column G, labeled 'Yld,' is the yield to maturity of the Treasury note — figured by dividing the coupon rate by the closing price.

Okay? The true yield of the notes is often dramatic, if set along side the coupon rate.

Take Relaxation Break?

By Edwin Darby
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — The businessman might feel better, be happier, and live a lot longer if he took a relaxation break every day instead of a coffee break.

Upwards of 23 million and possibly as many as 44 million adults in the United States suffer from some degree of high blood pressure. And this hypertension may be the most important factor predisposing adults to heart attack and stroke, responsible for more than 50% of the deaths each year.

A physician is the person to consult, but you could take some tips from those friends who are into such things as Zen, yoga and transcendental meditation.

However, it is not all that difficult. You don't have to go the whole yoga route, according to Dr. Herbert Benson, to achieve some pretty positive results toward lowering your blood pressure.

Benson is an associate professor of medicine at the Harvard Medical School. His field is cardiology — and he has been a consultant to the National Institute of Mental Health. In the current Harvard Business Review he has published the results of his lengthy study of such related matters as hypertension and stress.

One thesis: the high pressure life most of us live is only going to get worse as the complexities of modern society proliferate. The decisions will be more difficult, the pace faster. This increasing stress may be one reason, Benson finds, that heart diseases appear to be attacking Americans at younger and younger ages.

One conclusion: if you can't do anything about the stressful life you lead, you had better do something to alleviate the damages.

That's where the relaxation break comes in. Simple, easy; requiring, no devices, no study, no mysticism. (Benson says man lost something good for the body when daily prayer began to fade from society.)

20 Minutes

The Benson prescription requires only 20 minutes or so once a day, or at most, twice a day. It involves only four basic elements.

First, a quiet environment. That may be a little difficult for business people except for private-office executives.

Second, what Benson calls a mental device. This is a gimmick for shutting down the brain. Pick out a single-syllable word, repeat it silently or in a low tone. Benson suggests the word, "One," because of its simplicity and neutrality.

Third, a completely passive attitude. Rest, relax, don't try to force the experiment.

Fourth, and easiest, find a comfortable chair and stretch out, preferably with shoes off.

Benson also recommends keeping your eyes closed except for a necessary peek at the clock. Relax your muscles and breathe deeply through the nose.

He says the procedure is no panacea and no substitute for a physician's care: when an individual has a blood pressure problem. But he cites a number of studies that indicate the routine and similar routines like transcendental meditation, have brought about a significant lowering of blood pressure in both extreme and borderline cases of hypertension.

The doctor also finds a further health benefit. Many people under stress fall back on cigarettes, alcohol and drugs. There is evidence, Benson says, that a relaxation procedure can drastically cut use of any and all such crutches.

What's going on here, hopefully, is a counter to what the medical people call the "fight-or-flight" response. When an animal senses danger, its nervous system stimulates the production of adrenalin and prepares the animal to do battle or to run for its life.

The human animal reacts the same way to danger and to stress. But humans in this pressure-cooker world have it doubly tough. The adrenalin may be pumping all day long — occasioned by the nut driver and the traffic on the expressway, by a conference with the boss, by a rush job — but it isn't considered proper to relieve the tension by running away or punching someone in the jaw.

Benson urges top executives to give his simple technique a try. At the least, he says, the man who gets into it properly will probably feel better — the "feelings of well-being are akin to those noted after physical exercise, but without the attendant physical fatigue," he says.

Once tried and proven by executives, the relaxation break might be made a part of the business day for all employees, the doctor suggests.

Chicago (UPI) — Wheat and corn were substantially higher, oats irregularly higher and soybeans substantially lower this week on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Death Taxes Surge As Inflation Bites

By Leonard M. Groupe (c) 1974, Chicago Daily News Do you realize that the federal estate tax and most of the state inheritance taxes have a built-in "escalator clause," which every year, bit by bit (or maybe it should be bite by bite) has been increasing the percentage taken out of an estate for taxes?

Turning from former President Nixon's Watergate problems to President Ford's economic worries, the Dow Jones 30 industrials took a 45-point dip last week.

Wheat was up 6 to 18 cents; corn up 1 1/4 to 1 3/4; oats up 2 to 4 1/2; and soybeans off 17 to 23.

Advances in wheat came mostly in sympathy with a strong corn market and on late week export news.

Feeder Cattle

Omaha (UPI) — The weekly report of the National Livestock Feeders Assn., said trading of feeder cattle and calves at the industry's market centers this week again was a mixed, uneven situation, as far as demand and price were concerned.

However, a government report estimating a substantial decline in 1974 production brought on a bullish attitude that was strong enough to influence this market to across-the-board limit advances Tuesday and Wednesday.

The President's speech Monday night to a joint Congressional session dealt in broad terms with his determination to do something about rampant inflation.

Chief of Men's Reformatory Sought to Succeed Miller

Penal Complex Warden Charles Wolff Jr. is looking for a new chief of the Men's Reformatory after accepting, "with deep regret," the resignation of Associate Warden S. Scott Miller last week.

Effective the middle of September, Miller, 34, will become a parole hearing examiner for the U.S. Board of Paroles. He will go initially to Washington, D.C., and will work under former Nebraska Corrections Director Maurice Sigler, chairman of the federal parole board.

Miller, who worked his way up through the correctional system here, "has had an outstanding career in Nebraska," Wolff said.

"He is a very capable person, and the federal system is going to benefit from his experience here. We're certainly going to miss him."

Wolff said a half-dozen people are being considered for the reformatory post, and Miller's successor probably will be named before he leaves in September.

Great Western Sugar Ups Beet Growers Pay

Denver (AP) — Great Western Sugar Co., has announced it will make an additional $5.50 a ton payment to growers Sept. 6, company officials said.

The company said the September payment will be the fourth made this year to more than 4,000 growers in Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming and Montana.

It will bring total average returns for the 1973 crop to $31.75 a ton, $11.57 more a ton average than all payments for 1972 beets and marks the first time in history Great Western growers have received more than $30 a ton.

Robert J. Fisher, senior vice president of agriculture, said the additional payment will be made to keep growers up to date on their share of higher net proceeds from sugar sales.

Fisher said a final payment will be made to growers in October.

Normally the company makes three payments, in the fall, the spring and the final settlement in October. But this year, because of higher sugar prices, the company made an extra payment in July as well as the one scheduled for Sept. 6.

The September payment will add up to nearly $25 million.

Public Hearing Set On Centrum Costs

City-county planners will hold a public hearing Wednesday on modifying the six-year capital improvements program to include revised cost estimates for the Centrum.

The planning commission originally approved the Centrum as part of the 1973-79 improvements program at a cost estimate of $7.2 million.

Planning Director Doug Brogden noted consultants Barton-Aschman have revised those early figures, setting the cost at $7.4 million.

Additionally, present plans do not include a bus terminal, as called for in 1973. Bus waiting areas are proposed, however.

As proposed by the Downtown Advisory Committee and the City Council, the Centrum would contain a 1,000-car parking garage on the southern half of the block. The city would sell the land on the northern portion of the block to a private developer for conversion into retail stores.

Brogden said he finds that the Centrum, to be built in the block from 11th to 12th, N to O Sts., generally conforms to the Comprehensive Plan.

Brogden also asserted in his report to commissioners that the project "is significant to the success of the basic position of the city to develop a strong downtown."

The commission has slated a hearing Aug. 28 on the redevelopment plan for the Centrum. That plan now is being drawn up by consultants Barton-Aschman.

In other business Wednesday the commission is scheduled to hold public hearings on:

Power Info Meets Set For State

The Legislature's interim study committee on public power has scheduled a series of six public meetings across the state to gather testimony from municipal and power district officials.

State Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook, chairman of the subcommittee on public power, said the meetings are to determine what, if any, legislation may be needed in the 1974 session to assure Nebraska citizens an adequate supply of low-cost electricity.

Lewis said a number of power bills are expected to be introduced in 1975, and the committee's public meetings are designed to help acquaint senators with the issues.

The six meetings, all beginning at 1:30 p.m.: Aug. 21, Fremont, Dodge County Courthouse; Aug. 22, O'Neill, First National Bank; Aug. 23, Grand Island, First National Bank; Sept. 9, North Platte, Lincoln County Courthouse; Sept. 10, Alliance, Box Butte County Courthouse; Sept. 11, Sidney, Cheyenne County Courthouse.

Boxcar Blues, a Lonesome Tune

A Year Later, Diane Vyskocil Still Misses Home

By Jana Miller

There's a woman living in the foothills of Mount Rainier who longs for her country home, Pioneer Park and a hot Nebraska day. Diane Vyskocil has felt that way for about a year now, ever since she and her husband, Charlie, boarded a railroad boxcar in Lincoln and set out for the blue skies of suburban Seattle, Wash.

The Vyskocils packed a dog, seven horses and 10 tons of living into that green, 50-foot-long Burlington Northern boxcar. And there they stayed for four days and three nights.

A year later, the Vyskocils still get a lonesome feeling when they hear a train whistle. They still are stopped on the street and asked to retell their adventure by those who "want to hear about it first hand." They still are telling and retelling their story to school assemblies and civic gatherings.

And at least one of them still would rather be back home in Nebraska.

Lonesome Minority

But being a minority of one against a majority of four, including a husband and three children, doesn't put Diane Vyskocil in a very promising position.

Mrs. Vyskocil was back in Lincoln last week to visit family, friends and the family's beloved farmstead way out on Coddington Ave.

She came back to Lincoln with tales of life in Auburn, a Seattle suburb of 22,000 people.

Auburn is nestled in the foothills of the Cascade Mountains where it rains every day, where Mount Rainier looks like "a strawberry ice cream cone" from the Vyskocil's window and where "life is oh so different from life in the Midwest."

"It's slower, less sophisticated" back in Nebraska, according to Mrs. Vyskocil. And that's exactly the way she likes it. She said she grinds her teeth when she hears Washington natives acclaim the northwest as the most beautiful spot on earth.

The Pacific Northwest isn't as great as it's made out to be, according to Mrs. Vyskocil who enumerates unpleasanties like frequent union strikes, grocery shortages, an unstable job market in the educational system and 200 applicants for each open teaching job.

She goes on to tell about smog, crime, high taxes, expensive utility bills and out-of-sight land prices. Then she gets into undeveloped

4-H programs, millions of road signs and traffic signals, eight-lane highways and schools that are "machined to death."

The Farmstead

"I've traveled 20,000 miles in this state of Washington and haven't found anything like our farm yet," Mrs. Vyskocil said, reminiscing about the family's 80-acre farmstead on Coddington Ave. near Pioneer Park.

"Our farm," she sighed, "it's the best home I ever had."

Even before she arrived in Washington last summer, Mrs. Vyskocil longed for the farmstead and its white, split rail fence, its fruit trees, its corral and its comfortable Colorado redstone house "where friends and relatives dropped in often."

If only Mrs. Vyskocil could have packed up the farm, loaded it on the boxcar and moved it west. Then, she might have been satisfied.

Despite the missing Vyskocil farmstead, Washington offers some advantages that Nebraska can't match.

Like summer temperatures in the 70s, apricots to be picked and eaten for 7¢ a pound or cherries for 15¢ a pound. Then there's mountain trail riding, swimming horses through Green River, skin diving and salmon fishing. In the winter, there's snow-camping, snowshoeing and skiing.

For those reasons, the Vyskocil children are content to call Washington home and think about Nebraska only in terms of a brief vacation.

Mom, however, doesn't share their enthusiasm.

Regardless, all the Vyskocils have gotten involved in Washington living. Dad, an engineer sidelined last year after heart surgery, thinks about returning to work while participating in a heart research program with the University of Washington and the Veterans Hospital in Seattle.

The research program, called Heart Watch, was a main reason for the Vyskocils' move westward.

Straight As

Mom substitute taught in Auburn schools last year and finished up half the work toward a masters' degree, earning straight As in her academic work.

The older children, Loree, 15, and Barry, 14, spent part of the summer working in vegetable gardens and picking raspberries and blueberries for fruit farmers.

Little Gina, 6, spent most of her time on her favorite horse.

In their spare time, Mom and the kids froze 1,200 pound of apricots and put up 1,000 quarts of fresh fruits and vegetables. And everyone still found time for long trail rides together, sometimes lasting three or four days and usually winding up narrow mountain paths.

During the past year, the Vyskocils have known tough times, too. Like learning that Loree suffers from a rare and severe form of asthma, that one of her lungs already is collapsed and that the other is scarred like the lungs of a 60-year-old emphysema victim.

They've also had trouble with their modern, ranch-style bungalow house in the city. Accustomed to country living and a larger house, the Vyskocils have found their antique furniture doesn't blend with the style of their new house, nor does it even fit inside.

Regardless of the ups and downs, the Vyskocils still "laugh and laugh and laugh" about incidents which occurred along the 1,800 miles of rail separating their old home in Nebraska from their new home in Washington.

"People out here keep reminding us of our trip," Mrs. Vyskocil laughed. "They won't let us forget."

Handshaking Kind

Like the guy who parked his car in front of the Vyskocil house one morning, just waiting "to shake hands with a man who had the courage to make such a trip."

Or the woman who stopped Charlie on a Washington sidewalk and asked shyly, "Excuse my boldness, but aren't you the gentleman..."

"We knew right away what was coming," Mrs. Vyskocil laughed.

Then she relived a classroom encounter after a special report of the boxcar trip had appeared on local television.

"Maam," a pupil began, "are you really the lady that was riding horses on TV last night?" Mrs. Vyskocil answered affirmatively.

A pause. And the seventh grader "screwed up his face a bit," thought a bit more and let go. "Well, I think you looked better on television," he blurted out.

Mrs. Vyskocil didn't stop. "I'll have to agree," she volunteered.

With help from frequent reminders, the Vyskocils aren't likely to forget their four days in a boxcar, nor would they want to.

Who could forget a bath in a discarded 50-gallon sirup barrel positioned in a boxcar that's traveling 65 miles-per-hour? Or who could forget oldtime railroad men sneaking away from their routines to chat with the boxcar bums?

On the subject of bums, who could forget the genuine bums camped by the tracks and heating coffee on the rusty steel of an abandoned car?

The Vyskocils remember smiling and waving politely to the genuine bums as the bums "did a double take to see a lady in a boxcar."

Spoons And Pins

There are more unforgettable memories, like stirring vanilla malts, space food variety, with a ballpoint pen for lack of a spoon. Memories of hanging laundry with safety pins across an open boxcar door. And memories of falling asleep to the steady sound of the train engine and the jerky movement of the boxcar.

There are some moments no one could forget.

"That was the neatest way to go," Mrs. Vyskocil said, recalling the boxcar days. "And I wouldn't mind moving that way again, but I wouldn't want to put the railroad through the nuisance."

The Vyskocils made the trip for around $900 by use of century-old railroad tariff designed to encourage settlement of the wild west and help emigrants establish new homes.

The special tariff enabled farmers to transport their livestock, farm equipment, seed and sometimes families west by rail. Although used little since the 1920s, the tariff remained on the books until after the Vyskocils' trip a year ago.

That's when Burlington decided to do away with the tariff.

Maybe the railroad cancelled the tariff because it thought the wild west had been calmed by now. Or, just maybe Burlington feared that Diane and Charlie Vyskocil might get the urge to move again.

The Vyskocils, during their trip last year, stuffed six people, including one reporter, a dog and all their belongings into a boxcar and traveled west.

The Coddington Ave. farmstead, above, "where friends . . . dropped in often," that Diane Vyskocil misses so much. Right, the Vyskocils in their Washington home, r-l, Barry, 14, Charles, Gina, 6, Loree, 16, and cousin Karmen Hapen. The family likes Washington just fine, so Mom, who recently visited Lincoln, is a lonesome minority.

Earth People Find Home on Minnechauduzá

By Joel Thorson

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Valentine — Rootedness — the accumulated lore and culture of centuries of living on the land. That's what gave depth to the rural tranquility of the Delaware River home Joan and David Matheson were forced to leave behind in Dingmans Ferry, Pa.

Nothing could ever completely replace the loss measured by the Mathesons in generations of local ancestry and tradition.

But the couple's new quarter-section farm on Minnechauduzá Creek near here comes as close, they believe, as any place they could have chosen.

Impressed years ago by the generosity of Nebraskans, the Mathesons bought here last year, she said, to escape the "obnoxious" development mentality of the Army Corps of Engineers, and the legacy of "apocalyptic damage" it leaves behind.

The Mathesons' five-acre home in the rustic Minisink region of the Delaware River valley was condemned by the Corps in 1972. The Corps has acquired most of the Minisink to build a dam and reservoir it said will provide flood control and recreation.

Opponents of the project (including Joan, who for years edited a dissenting newsletter) see those claimed benefits as an excuse for providing cooling water for nuclear power plants. She views the Corps' land acquisition as the theft of a valley which was arrogated by William Penn and his descendants from the Lenape Indians nearly 300 years ago.

Leaving was a painful choice for Joan, a tenth-generation Minisink native. Nevertheless, she moved here to begin establishing what she hopes will become an independent, self-sustaining community of "earth people."

The move is not quite so difficult for David

Matheson, a one-time Army kid accustomed to moving from place to place. Paradoxically, he is a pensioned second-generation Corps of Engineers career officer who now believes the Corps has wandered from its appointed purpose into the bureaucratic realm of make-work.

With one year left before he retires from teaching high school science in Newton, N.J., 22 miles from Dingmans Ferry, David spends his summer months here sharing the work of fencing pastures, cultivating three gardens, milking the cow and insulating the two-story stone-and-stucco homestead dwelling they will call home.

For Joan and her aging mother, it is home already. The Mathesons' only child, daughter Hedda, is enrolled as a freshman at Chadron State College.

Opposition by conservationists has made construction of the controversial Tocks Island Dam unlikely, David said. But a companion project, the proposed Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area (NRA), survives.

Publicity created by the NRA proposal has drawn city people seeking what Joan called "wreck-creation." With them, she says, have come land speculation, subdivisions, ski resorts, truck traffic, game poaching, thievery, litter and even organized crime.

Eventually, she said, remaining in the Minisink became "like living with a corpse. It looks like the beloved, but it ain't."

Before talk of the NRA proposal, Joan recalled in a less sardonic vein, Minisink residents lived in a sort of tribal community, a culture with "a strong Indian identity." "A whole different value system coexisted that was unlike anything European," she said, a culture she considers "an example of how things should be done."

There were few clear land boundaries or "no trespassing" signs, she said, since land was regarded more as "tribal territory" than as strictly private property. "You owned land to preserve it."

The land "creates a culture," Joan elaborated, "where all these values are shared and all these families knew each other for hundreds of years. The Minisink was our religion. It was beautiful."

"It's gone."

"When you take the people out of the valley and destroy the culture," she said, "and replace them with idiot corporate money-grubbers, the soul is gone."

"Forty million Americans in this century have been expropriated. This is where your social unrest comes from. An uprooted people, having lost the context which gave them whatever morals they had, become barbarians."

Having passed through Valentine while searching for a new home, Joan said, she was attracted not only to the beauty of the "beguiling" Minnechauduzá but to a permanence she sensed in the people and their culture — a "rootedness" not unlike what she had treasured in the Minisink.

"When we first went to Dingmans Ferry it was like this," she said, surveying the slope of their farm upward from the wooded Minnechauduzá, a sparkling miniature Niobrara, toward the imposing row of sandstone buttes on the horizon.

"There's a culture here," she said. "But they're where we were, say, during the Civil War."

The Mathesons like the change of seasons — an antidote, she feels, to the "great conventional blah creeping into paradise." In David's words, "the Florida-California-Arizona syndrome doesn't appeal to me at all."

They value the wildness of their farm, buttressed as it is on one side by the Fort Niobrara National Wildlife Refuge and accessible only by way of a dead-end gravel road.

Whitetail deer, wild turkey, eagles, beaver, blue herons, sandhill cranes and coyotes — "I love to hear 'em singing," Joan says — are among the wildlife with which they share their land. And resident herds of buffalo and longhorn cattle can sometimes be sighted on the refuge.

"Babbity is here too," Joan says. "But it may not take hold." She opposes the proposed damming of the Niobrara not far downstream but has not taken any action because the people most directly affected — the landowners involved — must organize themselves first, she feels.

The three vegetable gardens meanwhile are producing, their soil already profiting from the Mathesons' mulching and composting of organic waste materials. Such natural cycles, the Mathesons hope, will someday be the basis for a self-sufficient, earth-oriented community consisting of two or three families of like-minded friends.

Joan envisions a workshop, a mushroom house and eventually an Indian-style longhouse built into the side of the hill, heated and lit with wood, sunlight and wind. Three springs will provide adequate water. "It could be completely independent," she said.

Appropriately, the farm has already acquired the name "Temple Earth" — because, she says, "it gives an idea of the way we feel about natural things."

"And I'm not through fighting yet," said an undefeated Joan Matheson. "I have a book to write."

Driven from the Minisink in Pennsylvania by city people seeking "wreck-creation," the idealistic Mathesons have started anew on Minnechauduzá Creek near Valentine.

Red Balloon Seeks Child's Identity

By Linda Ulrich

Take a group of happy, honest children, add happy honest teachers and what do you get?

The Red Balloon, a nursery dedicated to keeping both children's and adult's spirits high.

Barb Youngscap, one of the three teachers and originator of the school, notes that while it is admittedly scary from a financial standpoint, opening a new school is exciting because it gives her an opportunity to put some of her ideas into action.

And the first rule at school will be no rules — or at least as few as possible. "I want the children to be happy," she said. "I want them to be able to do what they want to do."

Thus, "if a child gets started on some slick picture and wants to paint all day, that's what will happen. Individual is what it is."

Individualized experiences for the children coupled with "a basic readiness for all kinds of things" means Barb is ready for and will even welcome the day the lesson plans go down the drain.

To better accomplish her goals, she plans to separate the children according to age with 3-year-olds coming for a 2½ hour morning session Monday, Wednesday and Friday and the 4- and 5-year-olds attending 2½ hour afternoon sessions Monday through Friday. Hopefully, Barb says, that will correct the discrepancy in maturity between a barely three-year-old and a five-year-old.

But both groups will enjoy a lot of play because "there's a great deal of value in doing something just for fun."

The other two teachers were chosen, Barb said, for their "strengths and differences from me."

Everyone Is Gifted

Barb's greatest strength, she feels, is an ability to look at children and on the basis of "what they say, how they say it, the way they carry themselves, their artwork and the way they approach other children," gain a pretty good idea of who they are.

Barb thinks it's a learned sensitivity, stemming at least partially from her own experiences working with "the gamut of children" from the very economically deprived to the gifted to her own daughter, Anne, 9 who has a learning disability and has been classified as borderline mentally retarded.

Glory of It All

"And part of the glory of it," she said, "is that you learn that not every child runs down the middle line."

Somewhere along the way, Barb also has learned that everyone is both retarded and gifted. "Anne is the most sensitive child I know," Barb said. "She cares more about how other people feel. If they hurt, it almost hurts her more than them. If someone has new shoes, she is the first to notice. She's a very caring person and that's the part of her that's gifted."

And it was as a supervising tester in the Head Start Program administering self-concept tests for Stanford Research Institute that she realized both parents and teachers are guilty of at least one sin of omission. "We never say to our children, 'you are really smart' or 'you are a really pretty girl.'"

Barb got her B.S. and master's in education from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

DOWNTOWN & GATEWAY GATEWAY OPEN SUNDAY 1 to 5!

By Pam Rabin

Gov. J. James Exon is a hunter and fisherman. "But, I'm even more of a fisherman than he is," grins Mrs. Exon. "I'm sure I'm the only governor's wife who raises worms in the basement of the mansion."

Omaha-born Pat Exon's interests are diverse. She had just put aside her tool kit and paints she's using to restore picture frames for old family photographs. Bandbox-fresh in a crisp Kelly green dress, she moved to another project, the recently opened Dolls' Room.

In a showcase with parquet flooring of tiny inlaid wood pieces are 33 dolls. They stand along the gallery, pose on the curving staircase and group about the grand piano and console tables of a ballroom. All but one, Mrs. Exon explained with pride, are costumed in finely detailed miniature reproductions of the inaugural gowns of Nebraska's First Ladies. The 33rd is dressed according to her only existing photograph, in afternoon dress.

We walked along to the gold and white state dining room where, in a niche in the farthest end of the long room, a superbly crafted silver punch bowl gleams on a sideboard.

Crafted in 1904, it was made for use on the Battleship Nebraska. "It was considered a proper gift for a battleship then," she said. The ornate bowl was returned to the state when the Nebraska was decommissioned in 1921. It is etched with state symbols — buffalo, Indians, corn, wheat and the state seal.

For state dinners she fills it with yellow chrysanthemums and surrounds them with blue candles set in the sculpted holders around the bowl's rim.

Mrs. Exon prepares dinner on cook's days off. She didn't hesitate when asked for her favorite family dinner. "My background is Czech," she laughed. "Roast pork with dumplings and sauerkraut!"

Her meals are often international. Once, when stumped for dessert with a Mexican dinner, Mrs. Exon decided on the kolaches of her childhood. To make them, she rolls out squares of dough, fills them, and folds one corner up to make a triangle before baking.

She recalled the Greek dinner she served to a group from Colorado, including the governor of that state and his wife. They were in Lincoln anxiously anticipating the crucial game between the Buffaloes of Colorado and Nebraska's Cornhuskers.

Moussaka, a rich eggplant and ground meat dish made with a tomato sauce and a cream sauce, then topped with cheese, was the main course. It was accompanied by an Olympic Salad — several varieties of lettuce tossed with salty Greek olives and feta cheese. Delightedly, to take to the game she presented her guests honey cakes — Greek "worry beads" gold and black for the Coloradans, scarlet and cream for Big Red fans.

The busy First Lady's entertaining doesn't stop there, for she enjoys cooking and the parties she likes best are buffet style — large and informal. "When we entertain all the state senators — there are 49 — and their wives, we have 100 people."

Sure to please at these buffets she said, are Beef Roulades:

Beef Roulades
 4 Lbs. round steak, thinly sliced.
 4 Cups packaged herb-seasoned stuffing
 1/4 Cup shortening
 2 Cans mushroom soup
 1 Can water

Cut steak into 12 long pieces. Pound with a meat hammer. Prepare stuffing as directed on package. Place 1/3 cup stuffing on each piece of steak, roll up and fasten with toothpicks.

Heat the shortening in a large, deep skillet and brown the roulades. Pour off fat. Stir in the soup and water and bring to a boil. Cover, lower heat and simmer until tender, stirring occasionally, about one and one-half hours.

Uncover and continue cooking until the liquid is reduced and somewhat thickened for gravy. 12 servings.

Another winner, her own invention:

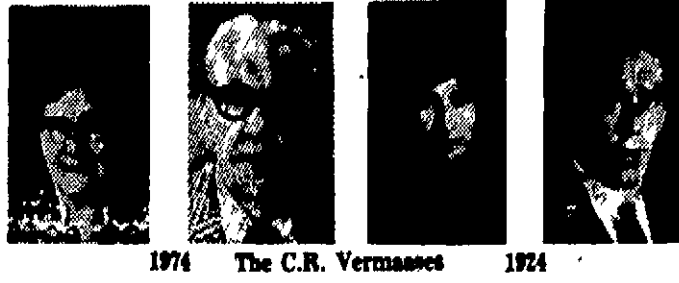

Mrs. Exon's Standby Casserole
 1 Tablespoon oil
 1/2 Lbs. hamburger
 1/2 Cup chopped onion
 2 8-Ounce cans tomato sauce
 1/2 Teaspoon garlic salt
 1 Teaspoon salt
 1/4 Teaspoon pepper
 1 Lb. broad noodles
 1 Cup sour cream
 8 Ounces cream cheese, at room temperature

1/3 Cup green onion, chopped
 1/2 Cup green pepper, chopped
 Slices of Velveeta cheese

Heat the oil in a skillet, add the hamburger and onion and brown lightly. Stir in the tomato sauce, garlic salt, salt and pepper. Remove from heat.

While the meat is browning, cook and drain the noodles. In a bowl, combine the sour cream, cream cheese, green onion and green pepper.

Spread one half the noodles in a greased baking dish. Top with half the meat sauce. Pour the sour cream mixture in a layer over the noodles and cover with the remainder of the noodles. Cover with the remaining meat sauce. Top with slices of cheese to cover and bake in a 350-degree oven for 30 minutes. 8 to 10 servings.

Your Horoscope

MONDAY, AUGUST 19

Your birthday today: Brings on an average, "grin-and-bear it" kind of year, in which you learn to let well enough alone while you gather experience. All relationships require genuine consideration, candor. Much of this year's vocational activity is distributed so pleasantly it seems like play. Today's natives have a strong talent for developing other people's ideas coherently.

- Aries [March 21-April 19]: Let the week get underway slowly, add nothing to create a stir. Home life vastly improves late in evening.
- Taurus [April 20-May 20]: It's time to bring partially completed projects back to the point of departure from plan, and prepare to begin over again. Be serene, accept quiet moments in romance.
- Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Errors right themselves if you're not in there pressuring and irritating people. Admit your own blunders and get started on a better path.
- Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Mental pursuits intrigue you while your regular job palls. Just be sure to get your normal quota done. Make no promises; double-check anything you hear.
- Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Completed routines are enough achievement today. Time spent in pleasant diversions proves more profitable than the results of pressing issues.
- Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: "Live and let live" is today's philosophy. Much that seemed settled unravels—a bit of repair and maintenance or their theoretic counterparts are desperately needed.
- Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]:
- Your main business should be preparations, rehearsals. Leave final decisions and settlements for tomorrow. Quit early to get full benefit from lively prospects this evening.
- Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Attend to and bring up to date recently neglected items. Keeping busy fortunately diverts you from a premature start on a new enterprise.
- Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Do what you can to make this an easy day. Avoid both haste and fatigue. You gain better perspective by discussing human qualities, subjective experience.
- Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Self-improvement programs persist, despite resistance, bad suggestions. Concentration on long-standing questions or problems offers unexpected insights.
- Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Keep your sense of humor while finishing left-over work and solving crises from the weekend. Let new projects momentarily wait.
- Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Financial affairs are really more complicated than they seem. Spend the day checking up before you take forceful action. Work steadily and systematically.

Freeloaders Need New House Rules

Dear Ann Landers: My husband belongs to a pinochle club. There are seven members and a spare. They play every Thursday night at a member's house.

All these men are married and so far as I know their wives are in good health. Yet three of these men never have had the game at their place.

I have made plenty of sandwiches and cakes and pies for these men and washed an awful lot of coffee cups. I don't mind doing my share, but I don't think it's right that they are at our house almost every month. What should be done about it?

Alice in Dallas

Dear Alice: Of course it's not fair, but the time to have established the house rules was when the club was started. Now you and the other suckers should band together and insist that the three freeloaders take their turn.

Dear Ann: What can I do about a relative who comes over quite often? My husband likes him, but I can't stand his filthy mouth. He doesn't care who's around. What's the matter with him?

Appleton, Wis.

Dear Apple: The weaker the ideas, the stronger the language. A person whose thinking lacks substance often laces it with profanity in an effort to give it muscle. In a word — he's intellectually bankrupt.

Bell Made From Cannon Tolls 100 Summers

By Anita Fennell

cannons of high-quality metal.

One hundred and one years ago, in the days of our pioneer forebears, a country pastor in Nemaha County was seized by a powerful desire.

He wished mightily for a church bell.

St. John's Lutheran Church, which he served, stood in open country in the vicinity of the Feibing post office (near Auburn). And a bell, he decided, was needed to tell his parishioners when the worship hour had arrived.

It so happened that the pastor's flock was made up for the most part of German immigrants who had settled along the Muddy Creek. In those times many settlers still had close ties with their old countries. And strong loyalties to their former rulers.

So the enterprising pastor, whose name was the Rev. L. Feistner, hit upon the idea of asking Emperor William I of Germany if he would donate a captured French cannon to the church for the laudable purpose of transforming it into a Lutheran church bell.

Within a year news came back that the old king had granted the request and had shipped to New York, free of charge, two French

Mystery Remains

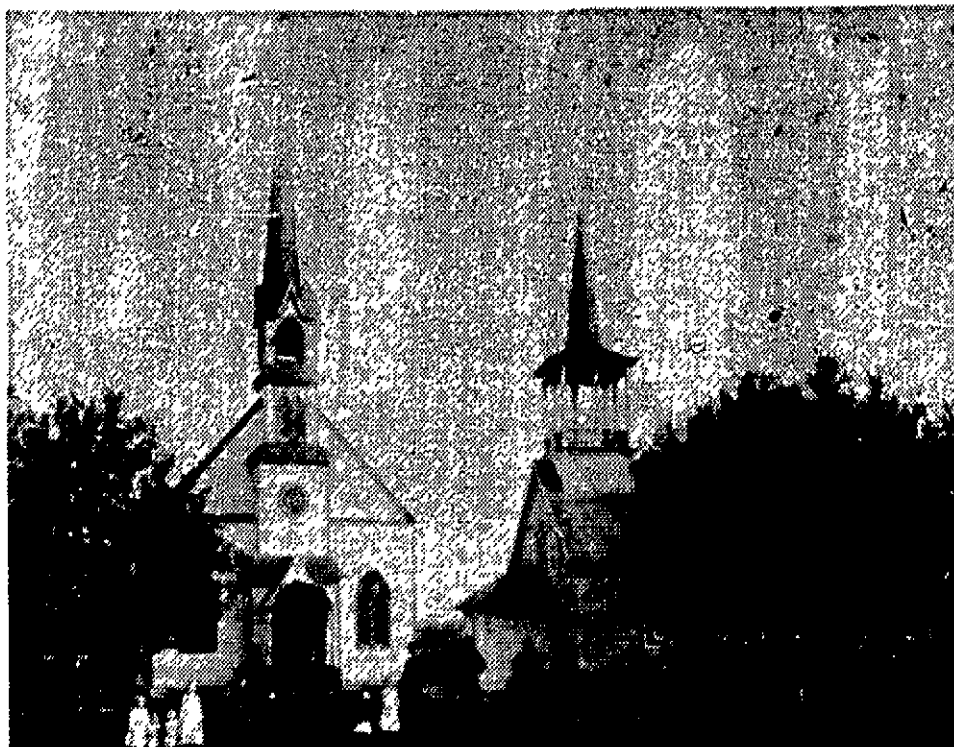

A mystery remains today about the age of those cannons. According to newspaper accounts of 1874, they were captured by Germans in the Franco-Prussian War.

But an article published in the Jan. 24, 1915, Omaha World Herald stated that after the defeat of Napoleon at Waterloo, a number of well-used cannons were stored by the French government in Sedan, France. "When this place fell into the hands of the victorious Prussians, in 1870, these ancient cannons were sent to the Kaiser as trophies of war ... and later were sent to a bell foundry in Troy, Michigan," the article continued.

Later it identified one of the bells as that which was hung in the 63-foot tower of St. John's Church the summer of 1874.

St. John's present pastor, the Rev. Everett Brailley, questions the accuracy of this later account.

For one thing, he points out, the inscription on the bell reads: "The Meneely Bell Foundry, West Troy, New York, 1874. For another, it was Napoleon III who lost the Franco-Prussian War in 1871 and there is no evidence the cannons were much older than that date.

The Old Stone Church, minus tower, still stands next to St. John's Lutheran Church near Auburn. In the tower of the newer church (left) can be seen the 100-year-old bell.

Like all good stories, said Brailley, this one got better as it grew older.

But Brailley ended his analysis with a teaser. Since the records of the Meneely Bell Foundry were lost by fire, there is really no way to know for sure the age of the cannons — unless some researcher finds it in the record of William I.

Stone Church Still Used

The church for which the bell was destined had been built in 1867, a year after the congregation began, and was known as the Stone Church. So substantially it was built, that after a century it is still in use as a meeting hall and Sunday school.

On July 24, 1874, the bell arrived at Brownville in good condition from its trip by barge up the Missouri River. Four days later, Feistner and a number of churchmen brought the beautiful copper, silver and brass bell to Feibing.

Believed then to be the largest in the state, the bell weighed 1,521 pounds exclusive of its clapper and every other fixture. It had cost the church only $250 for casting and $40 for transportation.

Who could estimate its worth today?

On a long-remembered Sunday, Nov. 15, 1874, people from the surrounding towns gathered to dedicate the cannon-turned-bell. Even Gov. Furnas came. He told those assembled that he had "returned the thanks of the state and of this people to Emperor William for the magnificent donation."

And the Nebraska Advertiser commented in its Thursday, Nov. 19, paper: "It seems, in fact, a great advance upon the peaceful suggestion to 'beat the sword into a pruning hook'; for in this transformation the instrument that belched forth death and destruction now calls to eternal life."

The word of the poem goes this way: "Let me grow lovely, growing old—/ So many fine things do/ Laces and ivory and gold / And silks need not be new." To grow old gracefully and beautifully is one of the lost arts of the world. It involves a recognition of one's years, and an acceptance of them which still allows young thoughts and young ideas: An unfailing appreciation for the world at large is perhaps the most important single contribution you can make toward growing old beautifully.

A summer teaching mission will be held this week by the Havelock Assembly of God, featuring the Rev. David

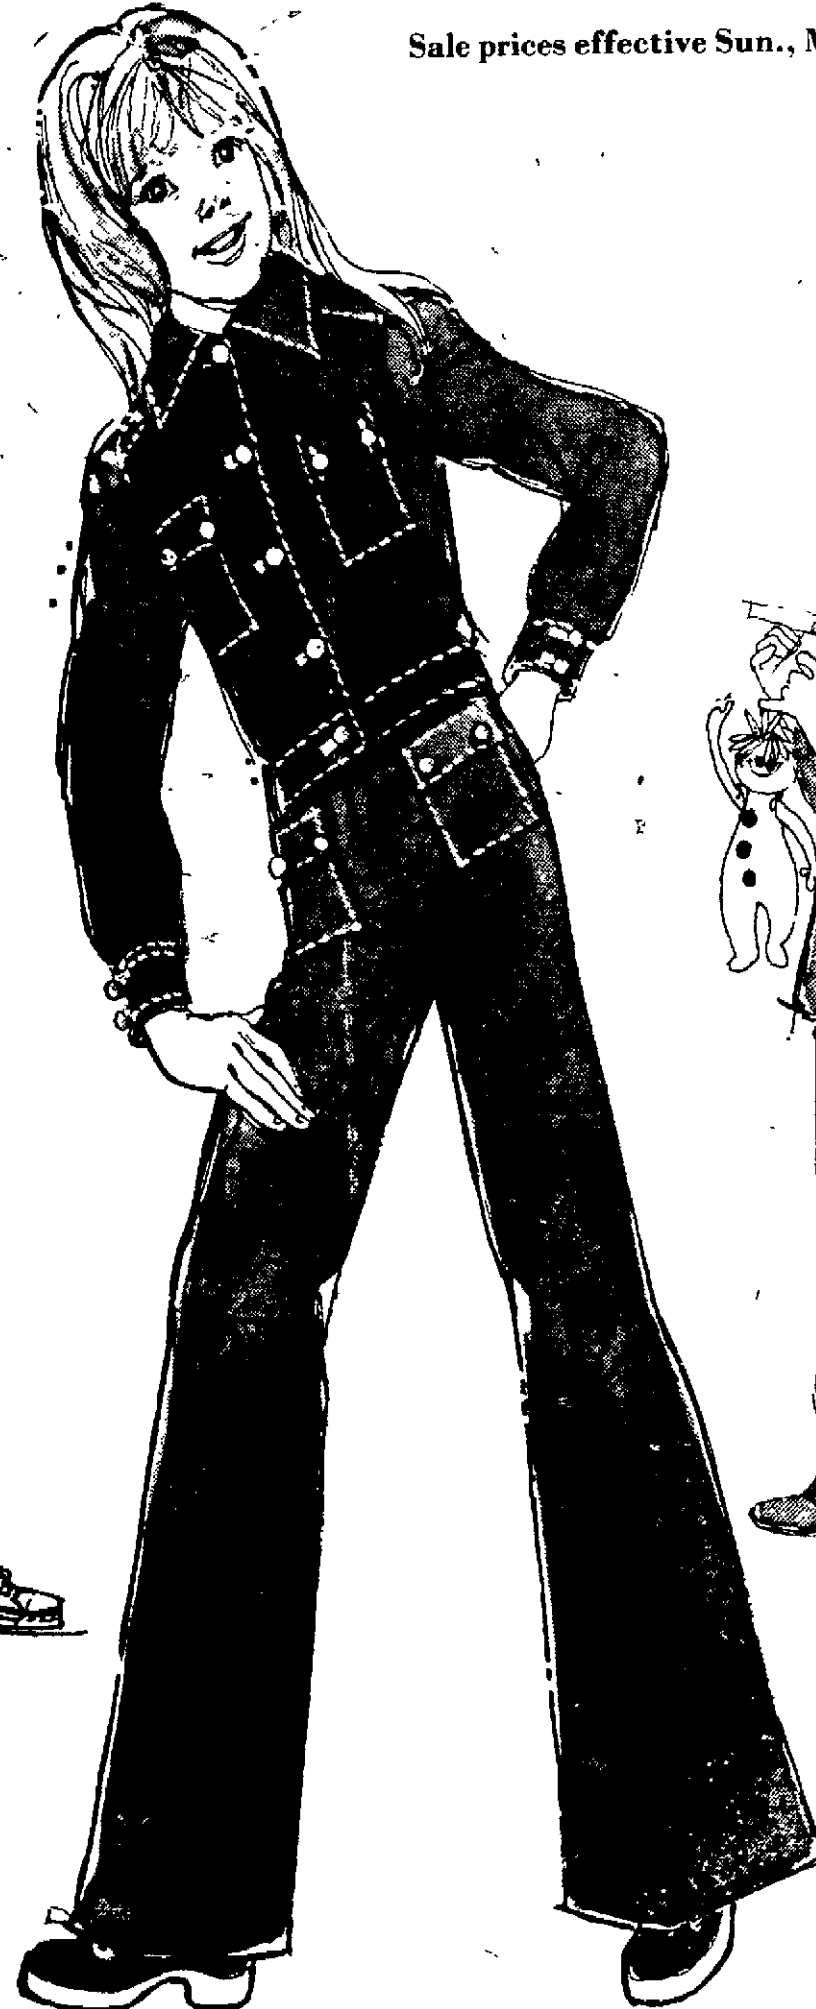

David Edwards

Edwards of Spencer, West Virginia.

Originally from Lincoln, Edwards is a graduate of the old College View High School and the son of the Rev. and Mrs. A. H. Edwards, who founded the Havelock Assembly of God Church. The senior Edwards are now retired.

While working for the Control Data Corporation as a senior systems analyst, Edwards felt the need for full-gospel churches in West Virginia was great, said the Rev. J. Robert Birdwell, pastor of the Havelock Assembly of God.

He said Edwards now ministers in a new mission church there. In addition, Edwards and his wife, Joan, have brought a teaching ministry to several charismatic church conferences and to summer camps.

There were four new head football coaches in the Big Eight Conference last season, but only Iowa State's Earle Bruce was completely new to the league. The others had moved up from assistant posts.

There's another "new face" in the conference this year in the person of Bill Mallory at Colorado, coming in after a successful tenure at Miami of Ohio.

Bruce knows great football players when he sees them because he spent six years on Woody Hayes' staff at Ohio State and he thought he had some in that category at Iowa State when he looked his squad over in spring practice.

"I looked at our material and I thought it was great," he told a group of writers at the recent Big Eight Kickoff Luncheon in Kansas City. "I mean when I looked at Larry Hunt, Ted Jernov, Matt Blair and right on down the line I thought we had fine material. Then I started looking at the films of everyone else and I saw that they had great material, too."

Cyclones Win Last Two Games

Bruce continued: "If you don't recognize Rod Shoate as a great linebacker or Joe Washington as a great running back, or Randy Hughes as a tough safetyman or Steve Davis as a fine quarterback you shouldn't be coaching." Fans recognize those names as members of the unbeaten Oklahoma team of last season.

"Then you look over at Nebraska and see John Dutton and all those fine football players and you start to realize that if you won't win the close ones you're 0-7," he concluded.

In fact, Iowa State was 0-5 almost before Bruce knew it and the Cyclones had lost a pair of two-pointers and another by a touchdown. They rebounded to win their last two league games and finish 2-5 in the conference for a three-way tie for the bottom spot.

"After my initiation last year I'd say we should all put the helmets on, fasten the chin straps and be ready for a hard-hitting football game," Bruce said.

Bruce believes great running backs and skill people make for great football and he says only in the Big Eight among the major conferences do you see the same type of "altogether" talent.

Asked if he referred to the Big Ten, he said, "Yes, but I wouldn't want to knock Michigan and Ohio State out of that because they have great talent."

He said the Big Eight proves its abundance of when its teams go outside and win 27, lose 7 and tie 1 like they did last season.

Iowa State Recruits Well

"I've never seen a league where there is so much talent, so much fine coaching, so much fan support and enthusiasm which helps win football games," he declared.

Asked if what he learned last year in the conference has changed his philosophy of how he has to recruit, he jokingly said "yes, we want big, fast guys who like to play football and hit hard."

Then, he seriously stated Iowa State has done well in the recruiting wars the last two years. "We've had two good years of back-to-back recruiting," he said. "And some young ball players can play for us, I'm sure of that."

He mentioned an incoming freshman, Mike Stensrud, a defensive tackle from Lake Mills, Ia. "He is 6-5, weighs 265 pounds and runs the 40 in 5.0 seconds and he's going to play," he predicted.

Bruce says Iowa State is going to have a "stabilizer" this season when teams come to Ames. "It's our new stadium, but we're not going to play there," he laughed. "When Nebraska and Oklahoma come to town we're taking 'em over to the mud field. And we're going to play 'em tough. Let 'em slip and slide and let 'em get close to our fans because that's what it's all about."

The contractors have told Bruce the stadium will be ready for use for the Nebraska and Oklahoma games.

"I would say I look at it now, no. I think it would be a monumental task to have it ready and to be quite frank with you I would hope we play Oklahoma and Nebraska on our grass field."

O. Roberts Loses, 1-0

RALSTON, Neb. (AP)—Fargo, N.D., nipped Omaha Roberts, 1-0, in the only game completed Saturday in the rain-drenched Central Plains Regional Junior American Legion Baseball Tournament here.

In dropping the morning loser's bracket game, Omaha became the first club to exit the eight-team double-elimination event, which has been struggling with the weather since it began Wednesday.

In the only other action Saturday, Gardenview-Affton, Mo., and Rapid City, S.D., struggled until the top of the sixth inning before the game was stopped by rain. The Missouri club holds a commanding 6-0 lead.

Officials wanted to play seven games Saturday. Only five games have been completed since the event began.

Pitching was the whole story in the Fargo-Omaha game. Fargo's Dave Rusch and Omaha's Laddie Kozeny battled on even terms until the bottom of the eighth.

Then Kozeny, who hadn't allowed a runner past second base and had given up only three hits, issued his first two walks with one out.

He was relieved by Doug Dunkas, who loaded the bases with another walk, got the second out, then walked Rusch to force in the winning run.

Redskins, Lions Trade Players

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Lions of the National Football League announced Saturday they have acquired backup quarterback Sam Wyche from the Washington Redskins in exchange for signal caller Bill Cappelmann.

Wyche is the brother of Bubba Wyche, quarterback for the Detroit "Woofs" of the World Football League.

Asher Fired By Sharks

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — The World Football League Jacksonville Sharks fired Coach Bud Asher Saturday and replaced him with former University of Miami Coach Charlie Tate.

Jacksonville owner Fran Monaco said the decision to fire Asher, who had never coached either in college or the pros before, came after a lengthy meeting between Monaco and the players to discuss the Sharks' 2-4 record. The team is in last place in the WFL East Division.

"It was time to make a change because of the record," said Monaco. "I came to Jacksonville to give the fans a winner and we just weren't doing this."

"I want the Sharks to be in the World Bowl this November but it wasn't about to happen the way we've been playing. So I decided a change was necessary."

Asher, 48, a former high school football coach and municipal judge in Daytona Beach, said he was disappointed at Monaco's decision.

"I have a three-year contract and I expect it to be honored," he said.

Monaco said the contract "very definitely will be honored."

Tate will become the Sharks' head coach while continuing his responsibilities as offensive coach, according to Fran Monaco.

Belmonte Suspended

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y. (AP) — Jockey Eddie Belmonte was suspended for 20 days Saturday by the stewards at Saratoga after an altercation in the track's recreation area.

The incident occurred during a softball game Saturday and involved Belmonte and Bill Nack, the racing writer for the Long Island newspaper Newsday.

The stewards took their action following an investigation. They did not elaborate.

The suspension will run from Aug. 19 to Sept. 8.

Earlier in the day, Jacinto Vasquez, Laffit Pincay Jr. and Miguel Rivera were each given seven-day suspensions resulting from disqualifications in three different races Friday at Saratoga.

The suspensions handed out by the Saratoga stewards go into effect Tuesday, meaning each of the riders will miss most of the final week of the Saratoga meeting.

Vasquez' suspension resulted from the fifth race. He finished third on Florist but was placed last because of interference.

Pincay finished first in the sixth race on Pedire but was disqualified and placed fourth for interference with two other horses in the stretch.

Rivera finished first in the seventh race on Ding Dong Dell but was disqualified and placed second for interfering with Deci Khale who became the winner.

Governor's Golf Halted By Rain

Saturday's deluge halted the Governor's Cup Sweepstakes golf tournament at Pioneers Golf Course midway through the first round of play.

The first day's action which was supposed to have two shotgun starts only saw the first half of the field complete 18 holes, while the second half, slated to start at 12:30 p.m. of the field never got off the tee.

All scores recorded in the early rounds will be thrown out and play will start Sunday at 7 a.m. at Holmes Golf Course with all golfers slated to play 27 holes.

The second flight will initiate play at 7 a.m., followed by the first flight at 7:37; the championship flight at 8:22; the third flight at 10:07; the fourth flight at 10:45 and the fifth flight at 11:07 a.m.

Gary Teel led the first round scores, (that won't count towards the championship) with an even par 36-36-72. He was closely followed by Jerry Ficke who tallied a 39-35-74 and Jim Papik with a 37-38-75.

"I was pretty happy with today's round but I don't think I was hitting the ball as well as I could have," said Teel.

"Even par should win this tourney but tomorrow is a whole new day," added Teel. "I would like to keep the 72 but I think I can do better Sunday. I seem to play better when I play more holes," said Teel referring to Sunday's scheduled 27 holes.

Teel, who won the open qualifying tournament this year added, "We had to play 36 holes that day and I seemed to get better as the game progressed."

Defending tourney champion Dan Bahensky did not play Saturday.

Hill Wins Golf Title

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Cynthia Hill, chipping and putting sensationally, dethroned defending champion Carol Semple 5 and 4 Saturday to win the 74th U.S. Women's Amateur Golf championship.

Miss Hill, of Colorado Springs, was runner-up for the 1970 and 1972 titles, but she had vowed that her third shot at the crown would be the charm and she proved it on a foggy day over the 5,942-yard par 72 Broadmoor Course.

Both finalists played as if they had championship jitters in the morning 18-hole round, which put the winner 3-up after shooting a disappointing seven-over par 79. Miss Semple, pulling and pushing many of her shots, soared to a horrendous 84.

They regained control of their games in the afternoon round, with Miss Hill shooting two-under par golf and Miss Semple, of Swickley, Pa., even par.

The winner showed she was not to be denied when she stroked in a 25-foot par-saving putt from off the green on the par-3 third hole. The defending champion halved the hole with a 10-foot pressure putt, but by then she was 4-down and Miss Hill's flawless play was the signal that her victory was but a question of time.

The winner increased her morning lead when Miss Semple three-putted the par five first hole for a bogey, went to 5-up with a six-foot birdie putt on the par-three fifth and stretched her lead to 6-up with another birdie from about five feet on eight.

Miss Semple finally won her first hole of the afternoon with a birdie from eight feet on nine, only to see Miss Hill go back to 6-up with a par on 11.

The margin dropped to 5-up again when Miss Semple birdied 13 but they halved 14 to end the match.

Horton Semple, the defending champion's father and president of the U.S. Golf Association, presided at the ceremonies crowning his daughter's conqueror.

Deadline Set

The deadline for entry in the working man's flag football is 4:30 p.m. Monday at the Lincoln City Park and Recreation Department offices with applications also being taken at the same place for officials in the league.

Stockton Widens Hartford Margin

NATIONAL

Wethersfield, Conn. (AP) — Front-running Dave Stockton clipped two more strokes off par with a 69 and expanded his lead to three strokes Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open golf tournament.

Lee Trevino, who won the PGA National Championship only last weekend, matched Stockton's two-under-par effort in the drizzling rain and vaulted into second place alone.

"The way he's playing, I'll have to shoot 65 tomorrow to beat him," Trevino said.

Stockton, who has led or shared the lead all the way, had a 54-hole total of 199, 14-under-par on the 6,598-yard Wethersfield Country Club course and the best three-round total of the year on the pro tour.

The previous low was 200 by Jerry Heard in the Kemper Open.

Trevino was at 202. Bob Wynn, a non-winning tour regular, trailed Stockton by two shots at the end of 36 holes. He could do no better than par 71 and drifted back to third at 203.

Bobby Cole, the slender, young South African who challenged and failed in last week's PGA National Championship, again was in contention for his first American title. Cole had a 67—despite a three-putt bogey on the tough 17th hole—and a 204 total.

Australian Bruce Crampton, big Labron Harris and Gary Groh were tied at 205. Groh had a 68, Harris and Crampton 70s.

Gary Player, the little globetrotter from Johannesburg, South Africa, who has won the Masters and British Open, had a 69 and was out of title contention at 209, 10 shots back. Defending champion Billy Casper had 68 and a 207.

Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, leading money-winner Johnny Miller and U.S. Open King Hale Irwin are not competing.

Stockton, a two-time winner this season, suffered his first bogey of the tournament on the first hole—the rain began just about the time he and Trevino got away in the last group off the tee—when his tee shot sailed into the gallery, hit a lady spectator on the ankle and caromed under a pie tree.

He got the stroke back on the next hole, however, rolling an 18-foot birdie putt.

Stockton, enjoying his best year in 11 seasons as a touring pro, then backed off from the scoring dramatics that had produced 66s in his first two rounds.

He parred around to the 12th hole and made birdie from 20 feet. He scored again on the 16th hole from about 15 feet—while the national television cameras had cut away to show the Travers Stakes horse race from Saratoga Springs, N.Y.—and left a chip shot one turn of the ball short of going in the hole for birdie on the 17th.

He wasn't threatened at any time.

Wynn dropped back with bogeys on two of three holes beginning on the seventh and Trevino moved past him with birdies on the 10th hole, from 25 feet, and the 15th after an iron shot left him a six-foot putt.

Carner Opens Up Advantage

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Joanne Carner, sparked by the first hole-in-one in her career, shot a three-under-par 70 Saturday for a 36-hole total of 138 and opened a five-stroke lead in the 54-hole $35,000 St. Paul Ladies Open golf tournament.

Mrs. Carner, who turned pro four years ago after a brilliant amateur career, aced the 140-yard par-three fourth hole on the windswept 6,402-yard Keller Golf Course.

"I missed, a couple of four footers on the first three holes and I was a little shaky. The hole in one really settled me down. It was the first one in 25 years of playing," she said.

Sandra Post, who trailed by a shot after the opening round faded to a one-over 74, but remained in second place one stroke ahead of the ladies tour beauty queen, Laura Baugh.

Bonny Bryant was alone at 145, one stroke ahead of Pam Higgins who matched par for the second straight day.

Joann Prentice was alone at 147.

Sandra Palmer, defending champion, started slowly and bogeyed three of the first five holes and finished with 76 for 148. She was bunched with several other players at that figure, including Murle Breer who skyed to 77 after her opening 71.

Renee Powell, the tour's only regular black player and one of the most popular among the fans in this event, was bothered by the high winds and settled for 78 for 149.

OSU's Smith Dismissed

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Oklahoma State University running back Fountain Smith has been dismissed from the team for disciplinary reasons, coach Jim Stanley announced Saturday.

Stanley would not release details of why Smith, who missed spring training due to a knee injury but was believed healed, was thrown off the team.

Another spokesman for the university said he believed the dismissal itself "says enough."

Smith was a starter as a sophomore and was the third running back last season. He had a two-year record of seven touchdowns, 836 net yards gained for an average of 6.4 yards.

Smith, 21, of Midland, Tex., was a tough inside runner and was fast when he broke outside. He played well as a kickoff return specialist.

Giants Obtain Back Jenkins

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Giants of the National Football League announced Saturday they have acquired second-year running back Ed Jenkins from the Miami Dolphins in exchange for an undrafted future draft choice.

Yarborough Gets Soap Box Win

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Curtis Yarborough, 11, of Elk Grove, Calif., captured the 37th running of the All-American Soap Box Derby Saturday at Derby Downs with a photo finish decision over Mark Raber of New Philadelphia, Ohio, and Edward Myers of Conabocken, Pa.

Yarborough, whose brother Bret finished second in last year's race but was declared the winner when James Gronen was disqualified, was clocked in 27.15 seconds as he guided his sleek golden racer down the 954-foot hill.

Kimberly Etchison of Anderson, Ind., was the only girl contestant to place in the top nine finishers. She took fourth place after gaining the semifinals with a close decision over Debra Meade of Muncie, Ind., and Vickie McKinney of Ventura, Calif.

Yarborough received a $3,000 scholarship for his victory. Raber, 12, won a $2,000 grant for second place, and Mayers, 12, was awarded a $1,000 scholarship for third place.

Holding Pattern Travers Victor

NATIONAL

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y. — A crowd of 30,062 showed up at Saratoga on a rainy day for the hoped-for duel between Little Current and Chris Evert in the 105th running of $110,100 Travers Stakes Saturday. What they saw, in the best Saratoga tradition, was an upset victory by Holding Pattern.

Holding Pattern, with Mike Miceli in the saddle, took the lead from Chris Evert with about an eighth of a mile left and then held off Little Current's patented closing charge.

The winner, who had never run more than 1 1/4 miles before Saturday, finished a head in front of Little Current, with Chris Evert third, another 4 1/4 lengths back, after negotiating the sloppy 1 1/4 miles in 2:05 1-5.

It was the third straight Saturday stakes the favorite has failed to win at Saratoga which in its long history has gained a tradition of upsets.

"He ran the best he could under the conditions," said Miguel Rivera of Little Current, the Preakness and Belmont Stakes winner who was beaten by Holding Pattern for the second time in three weeks. Holding Pattern had beaten Little Current by a nose in the 1 1/4-mile Monmouth Invitational Aug. 3.

"I doubt that our filly has ever been better," Joe Travato, Chris Evert's trainer, said before the race. Chris Evert, who was upset her last time out by Quaze Quilt in the Alabama here Aug. 10.

Courageous Gets Win

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — In their closest contest yet in summerlong races, aluminum hulled Courageous beat co-favorite Intrepid by two seconds Saturday in the fourth race of final trials to select an America's Cup defender.

Mariner defeated Valiant, her sister-ship, by 46 seconds over the 24.3 mile course in choppy seas with 15-20 mile per hour winds from the south west, the strongest since the eliminations began on Thursday.

Intrepid, two-time defender of the prestigious cup, was ahead by 12 seconds at the fifth mark, but her spinnaker fouled in the mast spreaders as she made the turn and acted as a wind anchor slowing her by about 15 seconds. Courageous took the lead winning by about half a boat length.

In trials to date, Intrepid has won seven of 12 races against Courageous. The overall standings, pending protest of two Friday races involving Mariner, gave Intrepid a 17-6 record with 14-7 for Courageous, 4-5 for Mariner and 1-18 for Valiant.

Mariner missed the entire observation trial series in July when she was in dry dock in Mamaroneck, N.Y. for drastic modifications after a poor showing in June.

The New York Yacht Club was to hear Mariner's protest Sunday morning. Skipper Dennis Conner raised the protest flags over starts against both Intrepid and Courageous.

While Mariner was beat to the finish line in both races, she showed for the first time ability to stay with the competition and Conner demonstrated uncanny starting tactics, outmaneuvering both other skippers.

was trying to become the sixth filly and the first since Lady Rotha in 1915 to win the Travers. She twice held the lead Saturday, giving it up the second time to Holding Pattern at the eighth pole, and fading to third, 3 1/4 lengths ahead of Prince Of Reason.

Holding Pattern, who was fourth after three-quarters of a mile and second after a mile, took the lead from Chris Evert nearing the eighth pole, then just barely held on against the flying Little Current.

Chris Evert, ridden by Jorge Velasquez, had broken on top, surrendered the lead to Menocal at the clubhouse turn and then had taken the lead again with a little more than half a mile to go.

Miguel Rivera and Little Current were far back in the early running, as is Little Current's style. Little Current was ninth with a half mile left, then began to move.

He was fourth at the head of the stretch and then broke out of the pack with an eighth of a mile to go in a desperate bid for victory.

Completing the order of finish after Prince of Reason were Park Guard, Gold and Myrrh, T.V. Newscaster, Kin Run, Menocal, Sea Songster and Acceptor.

Each carried 118 pounds except Little Current, who toted 126, and Chris Evert and Holding Pattern, who carried 121 apiece.

"My horse broke real good and I nudged him in behind the leaders to save some ground early," Miceli said of his winning ride. "We were close enough but the mud throwing back seemed to bother him some so I took him outside and then he was kinder."

"I had clear sailing coming to the stretch and I set him down and I worked on him good because I knew Little Current would be coming along. When I set him down at the head of the stretch, he gave me a good run. He had something left."

The victory was the fourth in six starts and the third stakes triumph this year for Holding Pattern, a dark brown gelded son of Old Bag-Miss Caesar, and first money of $69,660 boosted his 1974 earnings to $179,619 and his career bankroll to $275,347. His over-all record shows 10 victories, a second, two thirds in 15 starts.

The loss was the second for Little Current in his only two races since he won the Belmont June 8.

Chris Evert also has lost two straight, being upset in the Alabama here Aug. 10. Before that she had won four straight, the New York Triple Crown for fillies and a match race against Miss Musket at Hollywood Park.

Holding Pattern, owned by John Gerbas Jr., paid $27.40, $7 and $3.40 after spoiling the anticipated duel between Chris Evert, queen of the 3-year-old fillies, and Little Current, who had been considered the leader of the 3-year-old males.

Little Current, owned by John Galbreath, paid $3.20 and $2.40. Chris Evert, owned by Carl Rosen, returned $2.80.

What proved to be the game's decisive play was South middle guard Bill Turner's (66) block of Fred Knapple's (26) extra point kick try after the North's third quarter touchdown. Turner outmaneuvered Chadron's Dale Stahla (66) to get through to Knapple almost as quickly as holder Jeff Jurgens (80) got the ball.

Bellevue's Anthony Finds New Homes

By Dave Sittler

Monte Anthony found a couple new homes Saturday during the Sixteenth Annual Shrine Bowl, and thousands of Nebraska football fans hope he has a long and glorious stay.

Headed for the University of Nebraska on a football scholarship, the 6-3, 210-pound Anthony got his first taste of action in Memorial Stadium while operating from the unfamiliar I-back position.

The Bellevue High grad fit into both situations like they were custom made by gaining 159 yards and earning the game's most valuable offensive player award while leading his South teammates to a 7-6 victory.

"I really didn't expect to gain that many yards," said Anthony who entered the game nursing a tender shoulder injured earlier in the week during a practice session. "I didn't know how my shoulder would hold up. But when I scored the touchdown I got all fired up and forgot about the pain."

Anthony blasted over the left side of the North line from five yards out with 10:53 gone in the second quarter to give the Rebel squad its only score during the game played on soggy Memorial Stadium artificial turf.

The muscular Anthony, a Sunday Journal and Star Class A all-state selection last fall, broke the game's rushing record in addition to his vital touchdown while working from the relatively new I-back slot.

"I played halfback and power back (fullback) last year," said Anthony who broke Larry Frost's Shrine Bowl rushing mark. "The key to my gaining so many yards today was Mascarello (South fullback John Mascarello from Omaha Gross). He (Mascarello) has so much experience at fullback, that he was just running over the North linebackers and opening great holes for me."

Mascarello, a rugged 210-pounder who's headed for the University of Kansas on a football scholarship, said it was pretty comforting to know Anthony was running behind him.

"Blocking is pretty easy and a lot of fun when you're playing with an I-back like Monte," Mascarello said. "He's so good he makes yards even if the holes don't open."

Also an outstanding linebacker during his high school days, Anthony said Nebraska's coaches have indicated he'll get a further test at the I-back position.

"I told Nebraska coaches I didn't have any experience at I-back," Anthony said. "But they told me that was fine, because they wanted to make me into their kind of I-back anyway. I guess I don't have any bad habits to break."

Winning South head coach Milt Tenopir, formally of McCook, but headed to Nebraska as a graduate assistant, praised his team's defensive play, but said he was disappointed the wet weather held his team's passing game in check.

"I would have loved to see Darrell Walton (flanker from Omaha South) and John Magsamen (end from Lincoln Pius X) get a chance to catch a few passes," he said. "They are both talented receivers with good futures ahead of them. But it was really too wet to get an air game established."

South quarterback Jim Hamersky admitted he was also disappointed the wet weather allowed him to put the ball in the air only seven times.

"I was really looking forward to throwing quite a few passes," the Lincoln Pius X all-stater said. "But the ball was so wet I never felt like I had it under control."

"We knew we'd have to keep in on the ground, with Anthony doing most of the running. He (Anthony) is something else."

Cozad's Bill Turner, who saved the win for the South by blasting through to block the North's extra point try from his middle guard spot, said he was caught by surprise on the play.

"The guard slanted to the outside and left a hole wide open for me," said the Fort Hays (Kansas) College bound Turner. "That's pretty unusual on an extra point try."

Lincoln East tackle Marc Sparling spent several minutes after the game visiting with Cornhusker head coach Tom Osborne, who is encouraging the 6-2, 215-pounder to be a walk-on candidate with the Cornhuskers this fall.

"It makes my decision to not to walk on a lot tougher when he (Osborne) took the time to stop by and see me," Sparling said. "I love football, but I'm tired of it and don't think I'll try playing at the University. I'm interested in other things."

"But I had a great time out there today. I enjoyed the entire game."

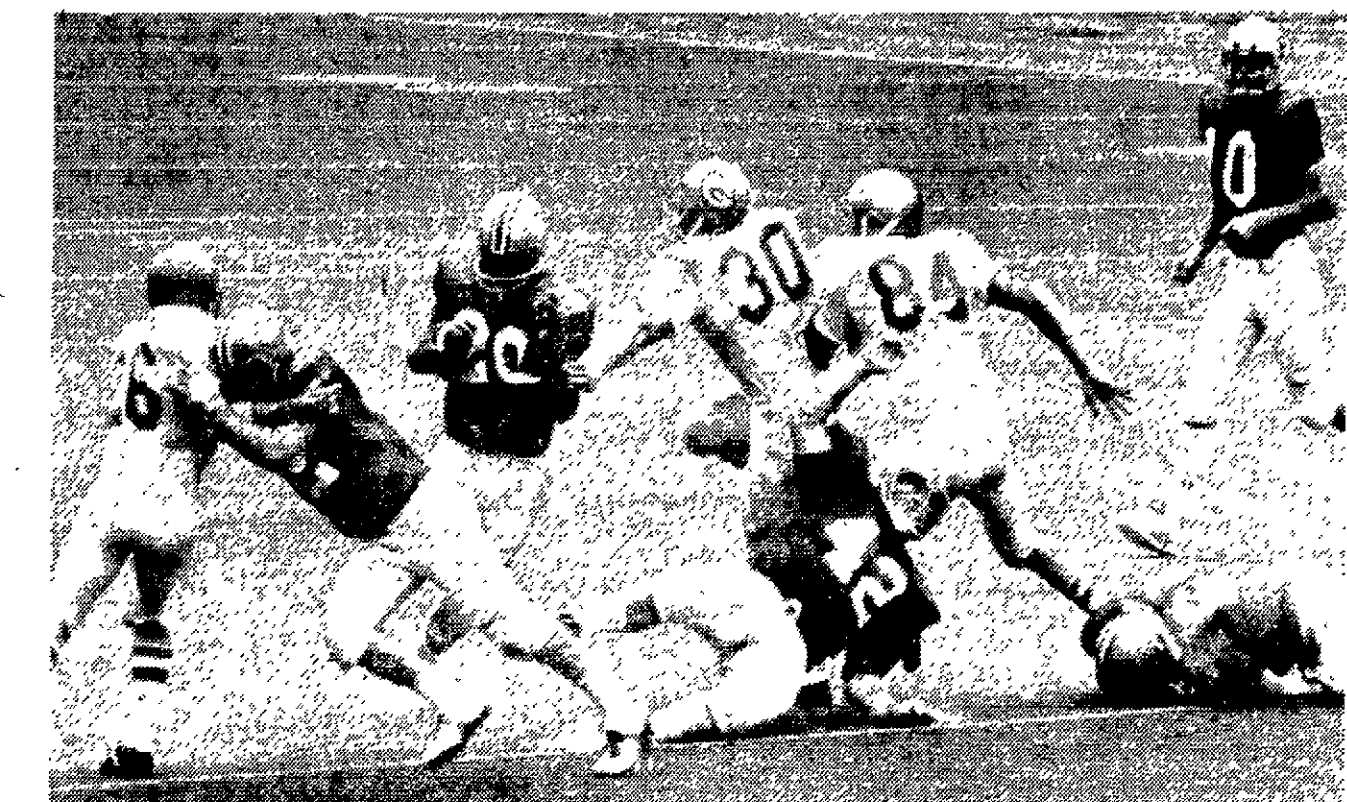

Anthony echoed Sparling's comments about the Shrine contest summed up the feelings of the happy South gridders when he said: "I didn't know what to expect after practicing for two weeks. But it was fantastic running onto the field. And after I got in a few good hits it was all downhill and a great experience."

Scoring Summary

South	0	7	0	0	7
North	0	0	6	0	6
SO.-NO.	How Scored			Time Left
Second Quarter
7-0	Anthony, 5-yard run				10:53
South drove 56 yards in 10 plays. Big play was an illegal fair catch signal against the North, giving South first down on the North 41-yard line. Anthony carried three times for 29 yards and caught a 9-yard pass to account for 38 of final 41 yards in the drive. Conversion: Mather kick.
Third Quarter
7-6	Pillen, 16-yard run				9:45
North needed only Pillen's touchdown run after getting the ball on the South 16-yard line when a bad snap from center prevented Tullous from punting from his won 32-yard line. Tullous recovered, but North took over on downs. Harvey's block sprung Pillen loose around left end untouched. Conversion try was blocked.

Bellevue I-back Monte Anthony (20), who won the Blue Howell trophy as the game's outstanding offensive player, shows exuberation after busting five yards for second quarter touchdown in South's 7-6 win over the North.

Although Monte Anthony (20) commanded most attention with his Shrine Bowl record of 159 rushing yards, it was fullback John Mascarello's fierce blocking, which helped spring him loose. Here, Mascarello (42) clears out North defensive back Fred Knapple (26) of Lexington to create running room for Anthony, who eludes North linebacker John Hicks (30) of Gordon.

Weather Ruins Staehr's Plans

By Chuck Sinclair

Prep Sports Writer

Bad weather has proved the undoing of many well-thought out grid game plans.

And Saturday in the 16th Annual Nebraska Shrine Bowl football game at Nebraska's Memorial Stadium that was certainly the case as North head coach Keith Staehr saw a steady rain put a damper on his plans for an all-out aerial attack.

"We didn't like the weather,"

Staehr said of his team's 7-6 loss in the annual tilt. "But I don't suppose the South liked it very much either. It definitely hurt our air game and ball handling."

"But, I don't know if our fumbles were because of the weather or the South's hard hitting," he added. "But we were planning to put the ball in the air quite a bit."

Despite the rain, the North still had intentions of going to the air, but the slick astro-turf worked like a 12th defender for the South.

REGIONAL

Four plays later, however, a similar pass from Smidt to Jurgens fell incomplete to end the scoring threat.

Jim Pillen of Columbus Lakeview, the North's leading rusher with 71 yards in 16 carries scored the team's only touchdown.

Led by Lexington's Ted Harvey's two-man take out, Pillen scampered 16 yards into the South's end zone untouched in the third quarter.

The rain also bothered the Lakeview all-stater's footing. "I couldn't get any traction for cuts," Pillen said, "so I just had to run over people."

Pillen noted the traction improved after a switch to football shoes, but it didn't help keep the water off his hands. "I couldn't keep my hands dry out there," he said. "It sure helped a lot when it (the rain) let up."

He was impressed with the South's defensive linebackers. Jack Blum, Hastings, Jesse Roberts, Omaha Gross and Mark Tullous of Bellevue.

"Our line was doing a great job opening holes for the Twice in the first quarter, North quarterback Steve Smidt of North Platte dropped off the line of scrimmage to put the ball in the air and both times, he slipped down on the rain-soaked carpet.

"The rain hurt our effectiveness right off," Smidt said. "I had tennis shoes on the first half and they caused me to slip; when I changed shoes at half-time, it really helped the footing."

"But I couldn't get any power on my passes," he added. "I was lofting it up in the air, giving the defensive too much time to react. Our line gave me all the time I needed to throw."

There were numerous bright moments for the North under the heavily overcast sky. Immediately following the South's lone touchdown in the second quarter, the rain let up and North quarterback Smidt connected with his favorite high school end, Jeff Jurgens for a 51-yard strike to the South's 7-yard line.

Cobra Cagers Still Unbeaten

The Cobras emerged as the only unbeaten team in the YMCA summer basketball league by edging the Eagles, 35-34, while the Lions eliminated the Buffaloes, 49-48.

The Lions and Eagles play at 1 p.m. Sunday for the right to play the Cobras for the championship.

Pride Takes White's Dogs on Show Circuit

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Writer

When you've had something you truly prize, you're really proud of, you try to show everybody you can, right?

That's what Lincoln's Ann White does, anyway. Ann, wife of dentist, Dr. Robert White, is displaying a certain amount of pride towards the family pet, a black pug. In fact, Ann's shown some 7,000 miles worth of pride in family pets in recent years.

Mrs. White is a show dog enthusiast, specializing in pugs, particularly black pugs. The current flame is Am. & Can. Ch. Rowann's Happy Ho Tei.

The prefixes, for the benefit of non-dog show followers, are titles. The Am. is for American and the Can. is for Canadian while the Ch. is for champion. And, while we're at it, the Rowann's is symbolic, too. Ro is for Robert as in Dr. Robert, the w- is for White as in Dr. and Mrs., and the ann is for Ann as in Mrs. White.

Happy Ho Tei is not one of the ordinary run-of-the-mill black pugs. He is currently the leading pug on the Canadian dog show circuit. It took a lot of time and travel for Ann and her son Robbie, but Ho Tei proved to be worthy of the challenge.

"He's the top pug in Canada," Ann explains. "We're sacrificing the American shows to go up there. It's just like the mountain that's there and we climb it."

It's not that the competition in America is scaring Ann off, either.

"He's done well here, too," she said. "Everytime he's been best of breed in a show, he's placed or won the toy group also, both here and in Canada."

The Whites have been raising pugs since the late 1940s when they imported some English stock. Since then, they've managed to build up the nine champions now making up breeding stock. The whole list of champions established by this Rowann strain is as long as your arm.

The careful White breeding technique has been quite successful.

"None of our blacks has ever been defeated by anybody else's blacks," Ann reflects.

An up and coming entry is Rowann's Burning Amber, a recent winner of the Nebraska Junior Kennel Club's Puppy Match, taking best of breed and first in toy puppy. "She is the only one in the U.S. out of three generations of champions, all black," Ann said.

The White family spends much time and effort and money to establish its list of records and top strain of pugs, but Ann thinks it's worth it.

"A show dog is an investment," she said. "A lot of people think it is an expense but I feel it is an investment. Like Ho. He's already produced a number of good puppies."

Raising puppies is the profit picture for Ann, who is one of the area's leading advocates in

Lake Cleanup

The Lincoln Bassmasters Club will be heading a lake cleanup at Sprague's Bluestem Lake today at 1 p.m.

Club president Marv Nystrom said anyone is welcome to assist in the cleaning up of litter and garbage around the lake. Refuse bags will be furnished by the club from the main dock at starting time.

You Think You Got Troubles!?

Moscow — While Americans dwell on their own troubles with insolent repairmen, Muscovites are savoring a horror story about the man who tried to get his outboard motor fixed.

The tale, which was related by the newspaper Moskovskaya Pravda, is not unfamiliar to Soviet consumers who have found that as their standard of living rises so do the headaches of maintaining their proud new possessions.

A reader who identified himself as M. F. Ivanov wrote that he had recently taken his outboard motor for repairs. Because motorboating is still a modest recreational pursuit in the Soviet Union, the only repair shop he could find was on the other side of Moscow.

Ivanov sallied forth across town in a taxi with his motor, which weighed 16 kilos, or about 35 pounds. He lugged the motor up a flight of stairs to the repair shop. The waiting-room door was shut.

According to the letter Ivanov pushed open the adjacent door with his foot and found himself in the deserted workshop. As soon as he set his motor down, the manager, P. G. Vovayevodin, appeared.

"Who let you in here," the manager demanded. "Get that unwieldy thing out of here."

The manager pointed to what Ivanov described as a "fearsome sign." "Entry by unauthorized persons strictly forbidden."

Ivanov wrote: "I started explaining that, far from trying to delve into the mysteries of the shop, I had found myself in the forbidden room accidentally because the reception room attempting to shut down the so called "puppy farms" which deal in sick or flea and mite infested puppies.

Proper breeding pays off in sales and championships, as the Whites attest.

"There are some breeds or strains of pugs which mature from seven-eight-nine months old," Ann explained of her breeding theory. "I prefer the slow maturing puppies. They don't mature until they are almost two.

"The early maturing dogs can sometimes be done for showing at age five, some even die at five from old age. Our dogs can be shown until they are almost eight."

Ho Tei is only two so has a lengthy future ahead of him. "The challenge is that you want to win," Ann said of her intent to continue on the show circuit. "The competition is never the same. You may win today and you may not. It's that kind of challenge which makes it exciting."

Ann is planning another tour of Canadian shows later this summer. But Lincoln and Omaha competitors will be able to see Ann and her pugs in action in November's Cornhusker Kennel Club and Nebraska Kennel Club shows.

Am.&Can. Ch. Rowann's Happy Ho Tei is one of a long line of championship show dogs born and bred through the efforts of Mrs. Ann White. Ho is currently top point pug in Canada.

Hunters Pay

Washington, D.C.—Millions of sightseers, picnickers and campers are enjoying the outdoors, thanks to hunters. A study conducted by the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife reveals that nearly three and one-quarter million acres of state game lands, purchased with revenue from hunting license sales and an excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition, are more heavily used by non-hunting outdoor recreationists than by hunters.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Friday's Game Commission public hearing on setting hunting seasons had shades of a dove hunting hearing or a coyote bill. Lots of conflicting discussion.

The conflict colored the waterfowl portion of the hearing. Western duck hunters wanted to shoot at the masses of ducks they claimed enter the state during the month of December.

Eastern duck hunters, meanwhile, argued their best shooting was in early October. The Easterners might well be suffering for that reason this year.

Reproduction of waterfowl in Nebraska, through much of North and South Dakota and a small portion of Canada was down a little this summer. Other portions of Canada experienced tremendous production in new ducks.

If my information is correct, the northern ducks take a little longer to get down this way than the ones raised locally or through the northern United States. If that's the case, the earlier Eastern season (asked for by Eastern hunting interests present at the hearing) will miss the big push later in the fall and early winter.

If my late season calculations also prove correct, the Eastern representatives might have just talked themselves out of the best shooting of the season this year.

Habitat Question Reaffirmed

During the discussions of game seasons and upland bird surveys, the word "habitat" snuck right in there almost unnoticed. Later somebody slipped again with a comment heard countless times:

"If we would return to the olden days of set-aside acres, we wouldn't have any problems with birds. We'd have as many as we did back in the '50s."

Habitat is a problem. The No. 1 problem in trying to maintain a sizeable upland game population. The effects of hunting on game birds and the effects of dwindling habitat on game birds are not comparable.

If there is enough habitat, hunters cannot physically damage bird populations. There aren't enough hunters to harvest that many birds. The problem is getting the land to grow the birds since new agricultural interest centers around planting every inch of available ground to crops.

The government is not encouraging set-aside acres any longer. It's harder to convince the farmer to leave a little more fence row untouched to help birds. Unless this attitude can be changed by folks like state game commissions, conservation groups, natural resource districts and the like, upland game species are going to be in trouble when the hard winters hit. Rebounding in numbers is tough without a home.

Mr. Conservation Present

The man who could carry the label, "Mr. Conservation," was present at the August Commission meeting. Dr. Bruce Cowgill of Silver Creek, himself a former commissioner, was on hand as the seven-man board ran through its two-day agenda.

Dr. Cowgill initiated Acres for Wildlife and then the Grand National Mixed-Bag Hunt at Silver Creek. Both are conservation efforts — Acres for Wildlife in setting aside voluntary lands for game habitat and the Grand National for education of the cooperative efforts of hunting and good game management.

The habitat situation of today could be put on the serious list. Maximum farm production for climbing populations around the world is putting game habitat on the way toward the critical list.

How does one curb the trend? Game commissions buying more land through fish and hunt license funds is one way. Approaching the land owners with land management practices, set-aside acre funding, urging to leave fence rows and hedge row cover, Acres for Wildlife, et al, are another way to spare cover.

I think the key lies with the farming community. As one state agricultural adviser commented recently, "Good farming practice and good game management go hand-in-hand."

Duo Eyeing Point Lead At Midwest

Is Nebraska ready for a high school all-star wrestling meet? Former Lincoln Northeast Shrine Bowl football player Mick Pierce, head wrestling coach at Raymond Central for seven years, thinks the time is right.

"Why can't we have an all-star meet in conjunction with the all-star basketball game?" asks Pierce. "That'd be quite a weekend for the sports fan around the state."

"He could see the wrestling meet on Thursday night, the basketball game on Friday night and the Shrine Bowl football game on Saturday afternoon," visualizes Pierce. "It could be a whole package like the Orange Bowl festivities . . . something for everyone."

Five years ago, such an idea might have been a pipe dream. Wrestling might not have been able to cut it financially then.

"But it's the No. 1 growing sport in Nebraska," says Pierce, "and we should be past the talking stage. Sellout crowds the last couple years for the state tournament should be our cues that we've come to the point where we can make it go."

Pierce

All-Star Problems Obvious

Although wrestling may be ripe as an all-star activity, it has obvious problems for such an event to materialize.

First of all, wrestling competition is based on athletes' keeping within their designated weight classes. Sometimes that's about as hard as putting toothpaste back into the tube.

Another problem is how such a meet should be structured. Should it be something like Classes A and D wrestlers against Classes B and C? How about the North-South dividing arrangement used for basketball and football?

Pierce admits the weight factor could create some predictable headaches before selecting all-stars and maybe even some unpredictable ones when it's time to train or compete after selection.

But he believes he has something which could solve some of the problem. "I think that an all-star meet would have to incorporate something like an 8-pound weight allowance so everyone could move up that much," he says.

Since Pierce coaches at a Class C school, he'd like to see the lower class wrestlers get a fair look in the surveying of talent for an all-star meet.

"Like the other sports, most of the best wrestlers come from Class A and B," concedes Pierce, "but C and D will produce some good ones every year to compete with the best."

Class C Quality Shown

"I found that out three years ago when one of my heavyweights (Jim Rezac) wrestled Boys Town's Jerry Allen to a draw in the National AAU Freestyle Championships in Evanston, Illinois," relates Pierce.

"There might be more lower class wrestlers as good as Class A wrestlers than you realize," according to Pierce. "Dale Bonge of Plainview was one this past season. He proved it this summer on that Nebraska AAU team, which toured Europe."

Pierce, a tackle for the South team in the 1962 Shrine Bowl, acknowledges that an all-star contest for a graduated senior "is an awful lot of hard work and giving of yourself. Physically and mentally, it's intensive. But it's worth it."

The Raymond Central coach is convinced his sport needs better representation. "I might be a little radical," he says, "but I think we wrestling coaches should formulate our suggestions through the athletic directors. Right now, we don't have much of a voice in this state."

That, however, may be changing. Lincoln East wrestling coach Jim Holeczek has organized a State Wrestling Coaches Association and was laying some more groundwork for it this weekend when the coaches gathered in Lincoln for their annual summer clinics.

With organization off the launching pad, maybe the group will make its first big project an all-star one. It would give wrestling even more momentum than it's already generated.

Scribner Dodge County Titlist

Scribner, with the aid of the league's top two pitchers, squeezed past West Point, for the championship of the Dodge County Baseball League.

Paul Eddie compiled a perfect 6-0 mark on the season and had a league-best earned run average of 0.94 for Scribner, while his teammate, Roger Schulenberg, recorded the most wins, compiling a 9-1 record.

Oakland, who finished last, still had two of the top three hitters, as Calvin Anderson led the league with a .409 average, and teammate Kenny Elssasser batted .395. Scribner's Dick Wobken squeezed between the two with a .406 average.

Harre Joins Youth Bowling Group

Add Mike Harre's name to the growing legion of top-teenage bowlers in the city of Lincoln.

Harre established his credentials by bowling a 738 series Wednesday to culminate a two-week torrent of shooting.

"I shot a 690 earlier in the week and 690 two weeks ago," said Harre whose games en route to the 738 were 235-279-224. "Actually I've come closer to 300 than that 279. I had a 287 earlier this summer," added the 18-year-old Plus X graduate.

Harre says his bowling game really began improving this summer when he started bowling in five leagues.

"The lanes (he bowls all his leagues at Plaza) have been perfect. I used to throw a bigger hook, but I moved inside and that has also helped," he said.

In bowling his 279 game, Harre started with two strikes, then left a four pin, then struck out. "I was pretty lucky I didn't a 4-9 split on that shot. It just was too high and coming too fast."

Although Harre bowls primarily at Plaza in leagues, he says he bowls at all the houses around town in practice.

"I'd like to work on my shots and keep my average above 190 so that I can get my card (PBA pro tour card). I'd like to try the pro tour and see how I can do," he said.

Major Manufacturer offers opportunity to BECOME AN INDEPENDENT DISTRIBUTOR

- $4600 minimum investment
- no selling required

Due to a planned expansion program manufacturer with successful nationally advertised brand name products will select full or part time distributors for Lincoln, Neb. and surrounding areas. Part time requires 15 to 20 hours per month restocking existing retail accounts, and you may retain your present employment.

36 or 72 locations available. CPA reports $35.10 and up profit per location per month. Each location requires an investment of $127.77. A $4,600 investment secures 36 locations. Our representative is accepting applications this week. For a personal, confidential interview call:

Disaster Area in Lincoln

"Some of my trees and shrubs have deteriorated badly in the last few months. They're alive, but they look terrible. What should I do?"
First, the cause of the deterioration should be checked.

For example, at present many trees throughout Lincoln have lost their foliage. In some cases, this has been caused by Dutch elm disease and, of course, these trees are beyond help. They should be removed as quickly as possible.

Conversely, other trees that look just as dead have merely been attacked by leaf skeletonizers that have taken all the chlorophyll from the foliage. These trees truly need your help.

Plants get their energy from the sun through their foliage. When a tree is defoliated, it is plunged into darkness that dangerously weakens it.

Buy a water lance and, after Sept. 1, water the defoliated tree until the earth beneath its limbs will accept no more moisture. The stress of drought coupled with the stress of defoliation is sure to increase the chance of mortality.

Do not fertilize the defoliated tree now. Frost may occur in less than 60 days and, if you feed that tree now, you may force out tender new growth that will be hit by frost — giving the poor tree yet another shock.

However, early in the spring see that the tree does get a good feeding. This will help to overcome stresses the tree has suffered this year and give it a good start on the next growing season.

Pay particular attention to any insect or disease that might attack the tree next year and get these under control as quickly as possible. Two bad years in a row will probably kill your tree.

Some trees in the city have deteriorated simply because they've grown old. This is particularly true of poplars, peach and plum trees. No amount of care is going to make these trees young and vibrantly alive. But they should not necessarily be cut down the first time they develop a few dead limbs.

You wouldn't remove your mother from this earthly scene just because she's crippled and old — and you should accord at least a little courtesy to the trees that have furnished you fruit and shade through the years. Trim out the dead branches — and love the old dears.

Let's face it. At present, Lincoln, the city of beautiful homes, looks like a disaster area. Never in 25 years have its trees and shrubs looked worse. The combination of drought and disease has really taken its toll this year.

And now — right now before winter comes — is the time to do something about the problem.

House of the Week

This Split Level

Has Sunken Room

By Andy Lang, AP

Split levels once looked all alike and were built only on sloping lots.

Not so these days. The better split levels have matured into distinct styles of their own. This one has an appealing exterior design, would be outstanding in any setting and can be built on flat or sloping land.

The brick planter flanking the entrance forms a continuous line with the brick veneer under the living room picture window and gives a "growing-out-of-ground feeling" as it ties in with the brickwork of the chimney.

Of special interest is the sunken 20-foot long living room, which enjoys the gracious note of a large picture window, built-in bookcases, stone-veneered wall with copper-hooded fireplace and decorative wrought-iron rails on one side of the steps to the foyer and dining room.

The adjoining porch off the side, with a door leading from

More than 19 feet across the back, the kitchen-dinette area is a dream of efficiency for making meal preparation easy and providing sufficient accommodations for the entire family. The U-shape of the kitchen has been arranged by architect William G. Chirgott for step-saving and gives a maximum of countertop area and storage cabinets in a minimum amount of space. The window over the sink, the bow-bay-window of the dining room and the sliding glass doors in the dinette, provide plenty of natural light and take full advantage of the rear garden view.

R-77 Statistics

Design R-77, a split level, has a living room, dining room, kitchen, den, three bedrooms, two bathrooms and a foyer on the living and sleeping levels, totaling 2151 square feet. A porch at the side can be reached from the dining room. On the recreation level, along with a 24-foot long room, laundry room, lavatory and foyer, is a two-car garage. The over-all dimensions of 79' 2" include both the porch and the garage.

Long foyer leads directly to living level, the single step to living room with fireplace, the few steps to the bedroom level and the stairway to downstairs recreation area. Kitchen-dinette stretches more than 19 feet across back of house.

Garden Gossip

Fall Seeded Lawns Have Best Chance

By Emery W. Nelson
County Extension Agent

The results of the summer's destructive forces are evident in many lawns. The number one culprit has been the summer heat and dryness. Ranking a close second has been turf diseases and in a few instances trampling feet have worn a path from home plate to first base.

Late summer or fall is the best time to seed a new lawn or to reseed bare spots in existing lawns.

the following steps are performed.

Step 1: Work the soil several weeks ahead of seeding. Shallow tillage or spading is best. Just be certain 2 or 3 inches of soil is thoroughly loosened.

Step 2: Prepare a good seed bed. Water the soil to settle it. Kill new weeds which come up. Rake and drag the area to firm the seed bed and level it.

This is also the time to obtain the perfect grade. The slope should be away from the house and low spots filled.

Step 3: Seeding the lawn is an important step. Use good seed of the desired variety, planted at the right time. Most people prefer a bluegrass lawn. Therefore, pure Kentucky bluegrass should be seeded alone. One pound of good Kentucky bluegrass seed should cover about 1,000 square feet and it can be sown uniformly by hand.

The seed is then raked into the soil to cover it to a depth of 1/4 to 1/2 inch. A mulch can now be applied to keep the seed from drying out. The mulch should be 1/2-inch or less in thickness. Clean straw, sawdust or peat moss make good mulching material.

The best chances of establishing a lawn are from seedings made between Aug. 20 and Sept. 10, although later seedings are frequently successful.

Step 4: Watering the newly seeded grass is particularly important. The soil must be kept continually moist until the new grass has made a growth of 1 to 2 inches. It is not necessary to soak the soil with each watering but a frequent thorough wetting is desirable.

Except in rainy weather, the newly seeded lawn may require a sprinkling 2 or 3 times each day. Care should be taken to water slowly so that no erosion takes place and the seed is now washed away.

Step 5: Mowing should be started as soon as the top growth is 2 to 3 inches tall. Delayed mowing so that the grass blades bend over and become matted should be avoided.

LET HOUSE CUT TAX BILL
Your home should be, besides your nest of dreams, an income tax saver. From the moment you take title to the day you turn over the key to the next occupants, you are endowed with opportunities to minimize your tax bill.

Also, using part of your home for business purposes constitutes a deduction for that portion of the home expenses used for the business. It is generally based on the square footage of space used for business purposes.

While you own the home, your two major annual deductions are property taxes and the interest on the mortgage. These can be considerable deductions.

Keep in mind that it doesn't matter whether you pay property taxes directly or through an escrow account held by the lender. In either case, you deduct the sum actually paid to the local taxing authority.

Realtor® Gerald L. Schleich is a Director of the Nebraska Realtors' Association, Past President of the Lincoln Board of Realtors® and a Graduate of the University of Nebraska College of Law. If there is anything our staff of 30 professional salespersons can do to help you in buying or selling real estate, please phone or drop in at either of the 2 AUSTIN REALTY COMPANY OFFICES, 3910 South St., or 3433 'D' Street, Lincoln. Future Seen In Cookie

Grand Rapids, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford may not believe in fortune cookies. But his wife and children do.

The family was in Vail, Colo., several months ago at a Chinese restaurant. Ford wasn't impressed but his wife Betty, now the new First Lady, and the children wanted to see what his fortune cookie said.

Mrs. Ford told James Riecke of WZZM-TV in a phone interview this week that the fortune cookie read: "You are about to have a change in address."

The Stuhr Museum of the Prairie Pioneer near Grand Island is situated on a man-made lake.

'Involvement of People' Turned Situation Around

Financial Woes Resolved at Stuhr Museum

By Helen Haggie

Grand Island — It took some time, but apparently the financial problems of the Stuhr Museum of the Prairie Pioneer have been resolved.

For several years there was indebtedness to the extent that the museum's board of directors approached both the Nebraska Historical Society and the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission to take it over.

Part of this turnaround is because of Jack Learned, executive director of Stuhr Museum since 1970. And he credits the "involvement of the people" for turning the financial situation around.

Operation budget figures show Hall County tax support to be 1.75 mills, lower than the allowable 2 mills.

Learned, who previously was voice consultant in Grand Island Public Schools, says the people have been involved in the programs which have been initiated and continued at Stuhr. Memberships are up and so were visitors... until this summer when automobile travel decreased throughout the state.

The building, designed by Edward Durell Stone and situated on a man-made lake, is a gem. The airiness of the interior is in direct contrast to the drab stuffiness so often associated with museum. The museum was opened to the public July 30, 1967.

Museum Airy

Attractions include a two-story main auditorium with glass dome allowing natural lighting. Fountains pools in the center contain fish. Plants grow in baskets hanging from the balcony of the second floor. There are potted plants in windows and niches throughout the building.

In the main gallery until Aug. 26 is an exhibit of early wood tools ranging from the prehistoric era through the early 1900s. Most of the tools belong to the museum, Learned said.

Also on the first floor is a print shop in which the works of area artists may be displayed. In addition, there is a gift shop featuring turquoise and sterling silver Navajo Indian jewelry.

The display areas on the second floor house a wealth of early-day Nebraskans. There are pieces of farm equipment used by Nebraska pioneers, furniture and accessories used in pioneer Nebraska homes, an exquisite exhibit of glass, an amusing and nostalgic display of children's toys — some dating to pioneer times — and a group of mannequins in fashions worn by Nebraskans of yesteryear.

In addition to the museum proper, a 19th century Railroad Town is being developed. Many structures have been donated by communities in Nebraska and restored to their original condition.

During the summer months, particularly, license plates on cars and campers indicate visitors from most states in the country.

Program Variety

Programs such as the Pioneer Children's Story Hour on Saturday mornings from June through August, vintage movies on Sundays during the winter months, lectures on life on the Plains, musical concerts such as the one which Steve Hanson of the Lincoln Guitar Society gave, youth singing groups and the Hastings College Faculty trio are all well attended.

"We have five or six programs on the steps of the museum during the summer months, Learned said. "Those attending bring blankets and sit on the grass or bring their own camp chairs. During the July Shakespeare in the Streets production, 700 persons were in the audience."

There are several educational thrusts at Stuhr. "We have a fourth grade, one-day live-in in the country school in Railroad Town," the director said. "The teacher has taught in such a school and children bring sack lunches.

"Another thing is the irrigated plot of ground which each year is planted to Nebraska crops — corn, milo, sugar beets, Indian corn and the like. It's amazing the interest there is in it — particularly the interest of persons from other parts of the country. School children in this area harvest the crops," Learned said.

'Buster and Billie' Mostly Soapy

Jan-Michael Vincent and Joan Goodfellow star as Buster and Billie in a movie by the same name.

By Holly Spence
The weaknesses of Buster and Billie, now showing at the Plaza 1, are especially noticeable because it followed by one week the viewing of Chinatown, one of the season's finest films.

There are times when the film shows a spark of deep feeling, but most of the time, it is a soapy and predictable love story of sorts.

Buster (Jan-Michael Vincent) is to marry Margie (Pamela Sue Martin) after high school graduation. Both are from respectable small-town Georgia families. Because Margie won't "go all the way," he takes up with the local gal "who puts out."

Billie (Joan Goodfellow), who comes from a poverty-stricken, illiterate family, is found to have more depth than meets the village boys' eyes.

Under Buster's courtship, Billie blossoms into a loving and tender girl. It is the characterization by Miss Goodfellow which contributes the most dramatic appeal to the film.

Although the naivete of teenagers of the late 1940's is portrayed quite well, the language in the film speaks more closely like those teens of the 1970's — shades of American Graffiti.

There are some moments that tend to be picturesque and filled with emotion, but some of these tender moments are bluntly put to rest by Buster's cue and pool ball bludgeoning of two fellows who rape and kill Billie for resisting their advances.

The method smacks of Walking Tall and its brutal violence. When the beauty of a love scene begins, there is an unnecessary nude scene of both characters which probably accounts for its R rating, along with the language.

Discrimination

The Chicago Commission on Human Relations processed about 2,200 complaints of discrimination in 1973.

Today's African Safaris Not Like Ones in Tarzan Movies

By John Justin Smith
(c) Chicago Daily News

You raise your big rifle, squeeze off a shot and an elephant falls to the ground, dead. And that, friend, just cost you 2,000 bucks in hunting licenses and fees.

Ah, but even a real white hunter realizes there is the better way. Shoot the elephant with your camera and the license fee is nothing.

"There are people who still want to hunt the animals," said John Alexander of Nairobi, Kenya, a professional hunter who dropped by the other day. "If they want to go, I'll take them."

Hunting for African animals is not all bad. Some kinds become so numerous that they endanger life, property and maybe themselves. Hunting has become part of game management.

But Alexander seemed just as happy with the idea of hunting with a camera. He conducts safaris in the luxury class. The price is about $360 a day for four persons.

It is recommended that you go on safari for at least three weeks. It takes you that long to get the feel of Africa and the animals, Alexander said.

He puts on his safaris in conjunction with Swissair, which will get you to Nairobi by way of Zurich for $344 in June, July and August or $585 the rest of the year.

As you can see, this is hardly a cheap getaway. But it does seem to be of good value when you consider what you get.

Alexander will meet you at the airport and whisk you to a good Nairobi hotel for some rest and a chance to buy the shoes (desert boot types for just $6.50) and clothing (olive green khakis usually) you'll need.

Next morning you're off in a 4-wheel-drive car for your first camp, which may be 150 miles into the country.

There you find that a 5-ton truck and a crew of 10 has preceded you. Your tent is ready, and it has carpet on the floor, is 9 by 12 feet and big enough to stand in.

There is a "drink table" and a buffet luncheon with salads and ham, sausages and roast beef.

A typical day of this roughing it: at dawn you have a quick cup of coffee and go forth in your rover to catch the animals as they move into heavy cover for the day's heat.

You may catch a shot of a water buffalo or perhaps a lion having breakfast. You return to camp for a luxury breakfast and take another fast morning swing through the bush.

Afternoons are spent getting ready for the big event of the day — the afternoon outing from about 4 until 7. This is when the animals do most of their moving and are easiest to find and photograph.

Back in camp, you shower and have cocktails around a campfire, listening to Alexander tell stories of the animals and the lore of the land. Then comes a full-blown dinner, perhaps at 8:30.

Mobile Homes Get Complaints

Kamloops, B.C. (AP) — Mobile homes are involved in more complaints for their number than houses or cars, says Mike Hanson, director of trade practices with British Columbia Consumer Services. He told the Western Mobile Home Dealers' Assn. that most of the complaints involve construction of homes not set properly on their footings.

Pro Gate-Crasher Collects Celebrities

West Palm Beach, Fla. (AP) — Who is that man walking arm-in-arm with Mae West, chatting with John Lindsay, shaking hands with former President Nixon, posing with Harry Truman?

It's Morris Lieberman, retired furniture salesman and gate crasher extraordinaire.

"Some men collect stamps and some men collect coins," says Lieberman, 62. "I go to parties and events and collect pictures. It's been my hobby."

"Just because I didn't get an invitation doesn't mean anything — maybe the computer made a mistake."

Lieberman, originally from Cedarhurst, N.Y., recorded his biggest coups in New York City.

He says his hobby started accidentally in 1928 at the age of 16 when he went to hear New York Gov. Al Smith accept the Democratic presidential nomination.

By chance, Lieberman says he sat next to Smith's wife and wound up being ushered out with the Smith family by an honor guard of police. The next day, he was pictured on the front page of a local newspaper, standing proudly with the governor's family.

Lieberman refuses to disclose his gate crashing secrets, but eagerly talks about his favorite triumphs.

When former President Truman came to New York in 1956 to stump for Gov. Averell Harriman and other Democratic candidates, Lieberman joined the VIPs on the podium at a political rally.

look like a fine candidate — I'm sure you'll be successful."

In 1960, Lieberman said he grabbed a seat behind Pat Nixon on a platform in New York while then Vice President Richard Nixon made a address in this campaign for the presidency.

In another escapade, Lieberman donned a tuxedo and crashed the 1970 premier of the film "Myra Breckenridge."

As hundreds pushed and shoved for a close look at Mae West, Lieberman recalled he walked up to her limousine and said, "Mae, you look wonderful tonight."

Movie magazines in three countries later carried a picture of Lieberman escorting Miss West into the theater.

Last year, Lieberman joined in an invitation-only party for New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, who was leaving office after eight years.

Lieberman said he was talking with Lindsay when an aide leaned over and whispered in the mayor's ear, "Who the hell is that guy you're talking to?"

"I don't know who in the hell he is," Lieberman said Lindsay replied. "But I seem to run into him almost everywhere I go."

House Dresses Are Scarce As Hens' Teeth Nowadays

By Gertrude Skinner

Superior

Shades of kid curlers, bustles and high button shoes, you can't buy a house dress anymore.

Recently I took stock of my clothes closet and found to my dismay that the blouses, shorts and pant suits hanging there had suddenly become very dull. After a summer of constant use and drip-drying, what else?

"What I need," thought I, "is a cotton house dress or two. Nothing like Grandma used to wear, of course, but something feminine and pretty."

More like the dresses that Mama used to wear. Dresses made of batiste, dimity, voile or sprigged muslin. House dresses like I used to wear wouldn't be too bad — gingham shirtwaists and full skirted brightly flowered cotton prints."

Blinded by the brilliance of my inspirational idea I stumbled upon a fact well known to everyone but me — they just don't make them like that anymore.

At the first shop I visited, a doll of a sales clerk, with about 18 summers to her credit, politely asked if she might help me.

When I replied that I was shopping for a house dress she looked puzzled, then confided, "I don't believe I know what a house dress is."

Oh, my dear, a house dress is a way of life, a mantle of times gone by.

The dull blue, red and gray calicos of my grandmother's time. Functional, drab cotton garments that covered milady from head to toe. Long sleeved, starched uniforms one wore to do the tasks at hand. Tasks that filled the days — scrubbing clothes on a wash board, beating carpets on the clothesline, feeding chickens, milking cows, hoeing gardens and butchering hogs.

Or the soft, freshly laundered sheers trimmed with ruffles and lace that my mother wore. She looked so pretty in them as she held court. They were for front porch wear, those dresses, for rocker sitting while she shelled peas or mended clothing or policed her lively brood of children.

My own gingham and flowered prints, gay, full skirted, soft to the touch dresses for cleaning and baking and sewing and raising chickens and doing farm chores and being with a loving husband and son.

Shades of hair rollers, shorts and bare feet, no more house dresses?

Art Kuhr at NETV TV Set Designer Does 200 a Year

By Holly Spence

Art Kuhr probably has one of the few jobs in town that takes him window shopping and furniture hunting, save an interior decorator.

"Sometimes I get desperate for ideas," said the scene designer for the Nebraska Educational Television Network.

Kuhr averages between 200 and 230 set designs a year for various educational and instructional TV shows and is currently under deadline pressure to complete 28 shows before Oct. 30.

"I had full intentions of being an accountant," he said, but gave up the credit and debit sheets for design after the Army whetted his appetite.

While in the Army, they had need for "tech" help and Kuhr volunteered.

"I dug a book out and started in," he commented.

While in Germany, he saw more than 120 operas, attended a number of master classes in design and served six months as a technical director of a German-American theater.

In 1967, Kuhr returned to Nebraska and joined the network as a cameraman. Two years later he started building scenery.

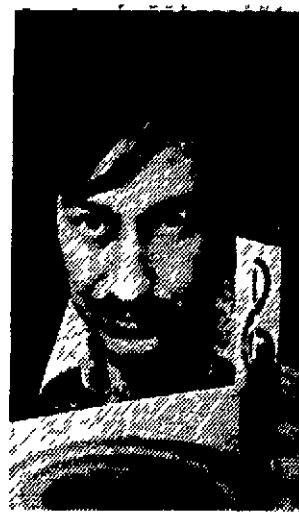

"I wasn't sure that I could handle the pressure work," said Kuhr, who added that he has learned to work with deadlines.

Lately he has been able to combine a vocation of television design and an avocation of theater design. And each has its special problems.

Sometimes the proscenium of a theater can be used to hide parts of scenery which is only seen from one point of view. Everything meets the camera eye, although television scenery can be more flimsy.

When he is preparing sets for the Nebraska Educational Television Network, Kuhr makes many models and ends up throwing away 10% of them. Each season, he is involved in preparing new sets for both the old and new shows.

He is disturbed that there is never enough time for all the research he would like to do; but

Art Kuhr

Kuhr also adds there are no books on television scenic design either.

Some of his ideas have been used at the Lincoln Community Playhouse, the University Theater, Pinewood Bowl and the Lincoln General Fashion Show. Kuhr also has worked with Waverly High School, on puppet scenery with Lee Rudge and with Dean Tschetter, former scenic designer for the NU Opera Dept. He also is asked to do workshops around the state.

"I try to show them the practical things like how to make bricks out of plastic foam," he said "I don't think we (scene designers) should hide techniques, we should share them with others."

This is just one of the more than 200 sets designed each year by Art Kuhr for educational television shows.

ALL YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT CARPET OR FURNITURE CLEANING

Getting made up, or better, being "transformed" from Hal Holbrook into Abraham Lincoln for Sandwich's Lincoln, a series of six specials to be presented over a two-year period. The first, Mrs. Lincoln's Husband, will be aired on the NBC (KMTV) network Friday, Sept. 6 at 9 p.m.

The makeup transformation was in the able hands of Charles Schramm. By the time he was through with Holbrook, not one part of the actor's own skin was left exposed.

Schramm — whose career in the art makeup goes back to The Wizard of Oz — prepared seven separate rubber appliances, made from an original cast of Holbrook's face, and fashioned after a mold made of Lincoln's in 1860.

The first two pieces to be fitted over Holbrook's face contained the hair, eyebrows and ears.

With the seven appliances in place, the hair pieces were added — a wig, beard and eyebrows.

The final touches included coloring for the lips, nose and ears.

The whole process took three hours every morning — the reason for Holbrook's 6 a.m. call. It required the actor's concentrated attention, since any wrong move could have ruined the appearance of the thin, fast-drying rubber appliances, resulting in a distortion of the Lincoln-esque image.

Not only Holbrook, but Schramm, too, had his daily work cut out. There was no way he could re-use the appliances. Each night he had to have a whole new set — a five-hour process.

ST. LINCOLN, Neb., Sunday Journal and Star FOCUS, August 18, 1974

O'Neil wondered if the duo, who have gained fame again with the record "Rock n Roll Heaven," would remember him or even recognize him.

"When they got off the plane, it was just like the old days," he said.

But O'Neill's multi-state fame almost seems tame compared with his past ventures. "My big-time radio career started in Los Angeles when I was 18," said O'Neill. "I was the No. 1 disc jockey (according to record sales) when I was 19 and the record has never been broken." Boosted by his fame, O'Neill moved on to television where he was the host of the national rock music program "Shindig," and soothing teens with music and advertised anti-acne pads for two years.

And the 34-year-old is in demand as show and record hop emcee. He is booked every weekend until Oct. 4.

"But I'm doing what I enjoy — I couldn't do it if I didn't love it," he said.

When he came to Omaha 1½ years ago, WOW Radio was beginning to rebuild its ratings, a task which has been a challenge

"I'm usually wrapped up at the station by 4 or 5 in the afternoon... and that's a 12-hour day," he said. Then he moves on to his "extracurricular" activities.

The station is concerned with an adult rock sound which includes the top tunes in addition to the top sellers since about 1955 "anything before that was pretty square."

"We do censor some stuff we feel is not in focus with our sound — some raucous, rough progressive rock and soul," he added.

"When I first came, I told them 'I was not a comedian or a great intellectual, but I am always honest with an audience and I have a helluva time,'" he continued.

Station Pressed
O'Neill said the station appears pleased with his performance, and has impressed him by asking for more. He has been asked to do something that might prompt an audience to say "wow, did you hear what he did today?"

"You can have to do it with flair or nobody will notice," he said. But his enjoying Nebraska is not limited to WOW.

"When I became a father, my values changed," he said and added that he got to a point where money and fame ceased to gratify him and he wanted a better life for his family.

Jimmy O'Neill thinks he's found that better life -- and he doesn't root for the Oklahomans sooner either! He found that out one morning on the air when he mentioned he was from Oklahoma.
